[be]gin, [be]long, [be]yond, [be]lieve, [be]come

To "be" literally means to exist in the simplest terms. Existence then turns "be" into a vast definition and for a two-letter word, the meaning that can be attached to it surpasses its small stature.

Warren Central has been in existence since 1924 and has done more than just exist.

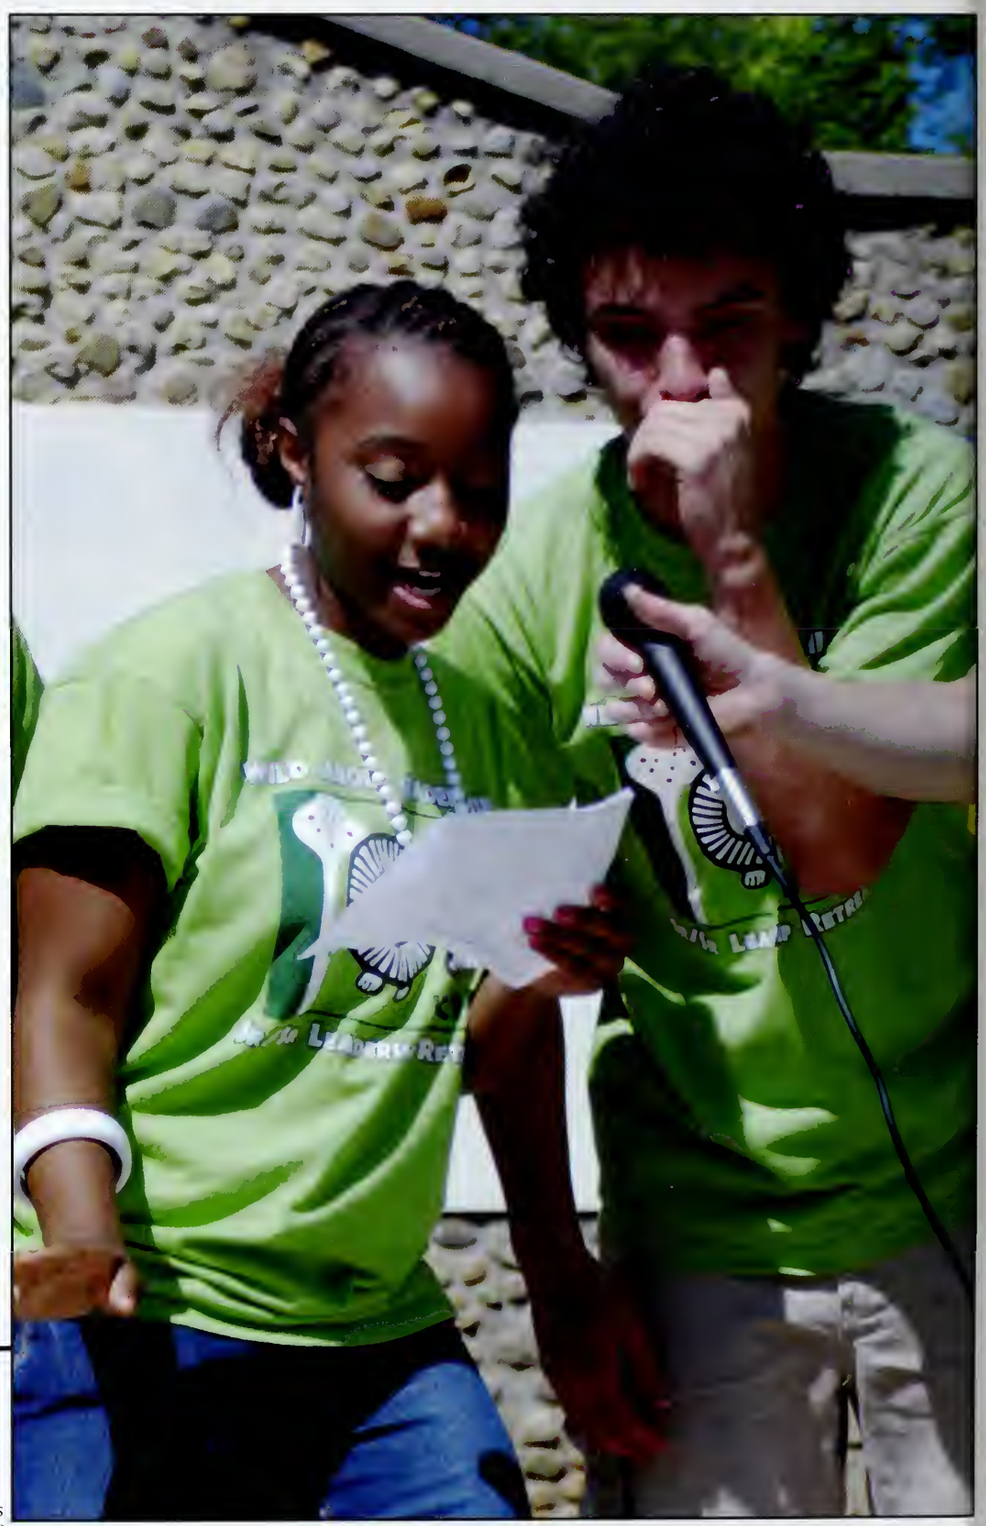
We have walked through the hallways to find more than just our locker, but find who we are. We have done much more than just merely exist on campus. We worked to create a better society, fought to welcome diversity and come to school five days a week for four years with the mind set of making a difference.

Every day we search to find what to be, who to be, where to be, when to be there and why to be there. These answers are found when students bring in cans for the Huddle Up Against Hunger or join a new club that promotes global awareness. Warren Central is more than just a high school, it's the beginning of the future.

Each test we study for, every question that is answered, each obstacle overcome and every mistake made shaped us to be who we are.

There are 10 definitions for "be" and each definition holds a different meaning, but its prime function is to work as a verb. "Be" is the essence of motion and constant movement, much like what Warriors do every day. It is more than just thinking, it is more than just planning, it is ultimately the actual doing of whatever action to get the job done.

The thing that makes a Warrior truly "be" is the action that is taken every day to have an ambition is more than just thinking about it, it takes action, it takes a Warrior. Even when the odds are stacked against us because that is when true perseverance is demonstrated. So the question remains, to be or not to be? That is always the question, and we choose to be.



Juniors Shane Griffin and Tiffany Matthews perform a rap about eggs at the annual junior/senior leadership retreat. The exercise was meant to teach students how to work with one another. The retreat was a fun way to open students' minds to new ideas and also to teach them how to be better leaders.

Homecoming

More than kings and queens

Tight spandex, leg warmers and ancient sneakers acted as essentials, while crazy curls and sweatbands represented nearly 100 Richard Simmons look-alikes during Homecoming week.

The '80s was a decade defined by big hair and workout routines known as aerobics, so it was no surprise that warriors put an '80s spin on aerobics day during Homecoming. The spirit of students proved that no one forgets fashion fads from the past, no matter how outrageous the apparel.

With fake eyelashes, face paint and a wide array of animal print, students unleashed their wild sides for zoo day, while some students practiced strenulously for Star Search, a chance for students to showcase their dancing and musical talent.

The traditional bonfire got students pumped for the game against Terre Haute South. Not only did the bonfire include games, but also shaving football star Anthony Freeman's right leg.

While seniors took spirit into their own hands by "getting silly" with neon paint, cheerleaders wore bright knee-high socks and various colored bandanas. Seniors encouraged underclassmen to get involved by joining in on the chaos and fun of spirit chants. It seemed to pay off as the football team smashed the Braves with a score of 70 to 7.

For freshmen it was the first, for seniors it was the last; either way the homecoming dance was a night full of memories for the whole school. No student could resist grooving along to the classic "Electric Slide" or slowing it down with "Lollipop."

Whether it was watcing Mr. Dustin Podorgski waltz with a weasel at the bonfire, soaking Mr. Rich Shepler in the dunk tank, participating in the unforgettable dress up days, or even scoring the winning touchdown, everyone played a role in the "highlight of the season."

TAKING HER LAST breath, senior Qaniah Douglas plunges into the icy water of the dunk tank. The dunk tank was a new addition to Homefest that gave students a chance to dunk their peers, teachers, and even Mr. Shepler.

leadership

Warriors define what a leader is

mychael spencer

In a school of almost 4,000 students it is hard to make a name for yourself, but senior Mychael Spencer did just that. His success as a high school student did not happen overnight and certainly was not handed to him, but obtained through hard work and great perseverance.

"I always knew that I wanted to make a difference in this school and being involved helped to make a difference," Spencer said when asked about his motivation.

Spencer's impressive resume is enough to motivate anyone; president of Student Council, vice president of Distinguished Gentlemen, member of Principal Advisory Council and Just Say No amounts to about 10 hours a week of his time on top of 20-25 hours he spends on homework each week thanks to all of the weighted classes he takes.

Quite possibly the most impressive thing about Spencer is his community involvement. Spencer volunteers a total of eight hours a week at Community Hospital East. There he gets a first hand glimpse at what life is like in an emergency room, which is especially helpful since he plans to become an Emergency Medical Physician.

Spencer accounts his success to his family who still push him to be all that he can be.

Beauty & the Beast

A Tale as Old as Time

Singing silverware. Dancing plates and napkins. Talking teapots. Mysterious creatures. It is a tale as old as time, song as old as rhyme: Beauty and the Beast.

Besides the flashy costumes, intense choreography and magical lyrics, the theater department's rendition of the classic fairytale presented the audience with the moral of inner beauty. Cast members worked non-stop for three months trying to perfect the famous animated characters.

> "I feel so blessed for the bonds I've made with everyone in the the cast. Being involved in the show, let alone being Belle, was magical."
> -Miranda Nehrig

Most little girls dream of becoming a fairytale princess when they grow up. Miranda Nehrig's childhood dream came true during her junior year when she landed the lead roll as Belle. Aside from the dark brown hair and yellow dress, Miranda also had the natural wit and mature vocals to fit the part perfectly.

Fierce muscles, side-burns and a long, dark ponytail depicted this hunk as a true ladies man. However, Gaston, played by junior Logan Moore, turned out to be a self-absorbed, arrogant, man who caused lots of laughter among the audience.

"Gaston was my favorite character," senior Elaina Cooper said. "He was hilarious and reminded me a lot of Beauty and the Beast the movie. I also loved the costumes. They definitely made the show."

The enormous castle set on stage beheld many enchanted characters such as Cogsworth the clock, (Yussef Abdelhak), Lumiere the candlestick, (Ignoisco Miles), Babette the feather-duster, (Anna Marie Hosei), Mrs. Potts (Brook Wood) and Chip (Hope England) the teapots. Most of the costumes were borrowed from the Civic Theatre downtown. The costumes and choreography were key factors when it came to producing unforgettable numbers such as the popular "Be Our Guest" and "Gaston."

The enchanted mirror not only reflected a pretty face, it reflected inner-beauty. In the end, the Beast's horrifying attitude and persona dissolved into a true Prince Charming.

As seniors Brook Wood and Hope England perform, the audience bursts out in laughter at Chip's quirky lines and bubbly character. "The best thing about the show was the costumes. They were so elaborate and it really gave the show a more fairy-tale atmosphere." Brook said.

"Voting is important because our forefathers laid their lives on the line to fight for our right to be fairly represented. This election was especially important because of the pivotal change that would come to our nation. Either we would follow on with the Republican path that was laid for our nation or we would drastically change our policies with a new Democratic president. Whether a small or large change can be made from an election, it is always important to do the one necessary task – just vote."

James Wager, 12

"This election was very important because the outcome was going to tell what the next four years were going to behold – more of the same or a change. Presidential elections are very close and just one vote could determine whether or not a state is going to be blue or red. As a citizen of the United States it is my civil duty to vote and to exert the right person to take office and make the necessary changes needed to better our country."

Making History

"If there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible, who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time, who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer," President Barack Obama said after winning the election that will forever be remembered in history.

Some students woke before the crack of dawn to cast their vote before school, while others woke at the same time to be clerks or judges at the polls. Students wanted to be involved in making history, whether that was by casting their vote or helping others make a last minute choice by passing out fliers at the doors of precincts all over the township.

"I voted because if we don't elect the right person it will be our fault that our country will be messed up and electing the right person will prevent that," senior Stephen McClain said.

At the same time history was being made at the national level, history teacher John Barnes was announced the new District 89 State Representative, beating opponent Chris Swatts. After losing to Lawrence Buell by about 512 votes in 2006, Barnes was endorsed by the Indianapolis Star and captured the attention of parents, teachers, and students throughout the district.

"Every vote counts and I did not want to spend the next four years without a right to complain," senior Joe Ybarra said.

As votes came in for state representatives, governors, and senators, the electoral map on every television station lit up with color, and Indiana turned up blue, a first since the 1964 election when Lyndon B. Johnson was elected.

With a record-breaking number of votes, students stayed up late not only working the polls, but watching television, anticipating the announcement of who the next president of the United States was going to be. Before midnight, Obama was elected president, winning 52.9 percent of the popular vote.

"This is our time - to put our people back to work and open doors of opportunity for our kids; to restore prosperity and promote the cause of peace; to reclaim the American Dream and reaffirm that fundamental truth - that out of many, we are one; that while we breathe, we hope, and where we are met with cynicism, and doubt, and those who tell us that we can't, we will respond with that timeless creed that sums up the spirit of a people," Obama said as he ended his acceptance speech.

November 4, 2008, a day that America captured the world's attention, a day that every student will remember and a day that will be forever remembered in history.

"CAN"paign review

Since there are over 4,000 people at Warren Central it would take each one of that 4,000 to reach a huge goal, bringing in enough food items to feed the hungry families of Warren Township.

In 2008 there was a rising unemployment, homes getting foreclosed, and tables without food so it was not a surprise when the goal of the canned food drive was short a little under 10,000 of the original goal.

Even though the goal was not met, more families than ever were able to have a better Thanksgiving than they would of thanks to the goodness of the Warriors. Through such tough times, a glimmer of hope was shining throughout the halls of Warren Central as bags and bags of food items were carted to the Media Center during first period that Friday.

While the huddle up against hunger was promoting a serious issue in the community, it did not by any means prevent students and teachers from having a little fun. Thanks to the WCTV, seniors Michael Murphy, Stephanie Weinman, Mychael Spencer and Angie Forshee hosted a two-week special edition of "Warren Live!"

With 2008 being a historical election year, WCTV decided to "vote" out hunger in 2008. This "CAN"paign was the central theme of donating cans, creating more than just the spirit of giving.

"It was great to have such an impact on people and not only a start to their mornings but also helping out the community," Forshee said

"WARREN LIVE!" HOSTS a two week special edition of "Warren Live!" in honor of the canned food drive. School media played an important part in promoting and encouraging the student body to bring in as many canned food items as possible. Although the drive was for a serious cause the students involved found ways to have a little fun while promoting an important of the community.

"I thought it was a good cause and that it was pretty awesome that we were able to bring in as many cans and able to feed as many families as possible."

SPECIAL GUESTS ON "Warren Live!" encourage the student body to bring in as many food items they can. Even with the tough economic times, students and staff were able to bring in almost 30,000 cans and helped over 120 families. The spirit of giving was abundant throughout the Warrior Nation for the 14 days of huddling up aganist hunger.

Winterfest

weekends are for the Warriors

Senior Edward Hazelett anticipates the rebound as Jordan Kennedy attempts to score. The boys came up just short of a win against Center Grove with a final score of 63-55.

With giant candybars, the traditional Lip Sync contest, and an intense basketball game followed by a dance, the week of February 6, was one of the best weeks ever for the Warriors.

Chocolate seemed to play an important role in Winterfest week as students disguised themselves as Tootsie Rolls, M & M's and Hershey Bars for candy day. Warrior Bars made a huge comeback as students flocked to the cafeteria in hopes of finding a golden ticket. Each golden ticket guaranteed students a chance to win an iPod Nano.

Although chocolate was a delicious way to start off the week, it was not as intense as the Friday night face-off against the Center Grove Trojans.

With new head coach Greg Graham leading the dedicated boys basketball team, Golden Graham fans packed the stands to witness the intensity. During halftime, seniors Keona Bruen, Courtni Minor, and Keiana Webb performed their winning lip sync number, "Single Ladies" by Beyonce.

"It was an experience that I will never forget," senior Keona Bruen said. "I'm glad that I had the opportunity to perform with friends and put on a show for others." After the lip sync performance and the crowning of the Winterfest king and queen, the game resumed and the pressure increased.

The crowd chanted louder and the boys fought harder. However, that was not enough to gain a victory. The Warriors fell short of a win with a final score of 63-55.

Even though the basketball team lost, that did not stop students as they went from the stands to the commons to enjoy the annual dance that followed the game.

Chocolate, lip sync, basketball and the dance were all rewards that came from Winterfest week.

Picnic

Boy meets girl, girl meets boy's best friend

The halls of Warren Central were bare and dark as the afternoon grew into the night, yet there was a soft glow coming from the Performing Arts Center. That soft glow was the cast and crew of "Picnic" preparing for the final dress rehearsal before opening night.

Twelve cast members and over 35 crewmembers were rushing to get ready with costumes, makeup, hair cuts, lights, sets, and last minute scene changes.

Finally, the actors are called from the dressing room to the studio theatre where they begin to warm up "Only do one energy warm up, work on focus, and annunciation," Director Ms. Reiberg said to the circle of characters in reference to the three areas of warming up.

> "It was the most difficult show I've ever done but I could not think of any better way to end my high school theatre career."
> -Angie Forshee

Seniors Angie Forshee, Jackie McQueen and Kami Spicklemire take charge and begin to warm up their voices for a strenuous performance and even play a few games to relieve the nervous energy. Finally, they bring the energy of the room down to the center of the stage where they gather into a tight huddle starting low and then slowly standing straight and finally jumping around. Throughout the exercise they murmur words like "focus" and "energy" each at their own pace.

With warm ups over, the actors return to their dressing rooms and put the final touches on makeup and any costume repairs. The energy backstage moved throughout every actor and every crewmember, this is what they had been working up to for almost four months.

The chemistry of the cast was undeniable, they were not just actors who performed together, and they had become the best of friends. These relationships radiated onto the stage and thus brought "Picnic" to life.

A little town in Kansas had big drama with even bigger characters all searching for something, whether it was beauty, brains, love, respect or even youth. The reality of the play lies in the desire of the characters and the fact that what they planned to happen did not mean it was going to happen that way.

Raisin

When is the time to love someone the most?

A black middle class family on the Southside of Chicago, just before the peak of the civil rights movement. They have no money. They donít have a nice house. They donít have equal rights. What do the Youngers have? They have love.

While the Youngerís situation was a far cry for most of the student-actors who played in "Raisin in the Sun," it didn't stop them from nailing their parts.

Senior Ignoisco Miles, who got his third leading role in a WCHS performance with Raisin, was one who had a difficult time grasping his character, at first.

"With 'Raisin in the Sun', I had to study my character a lot more," Miles said. "I had to really put myself in his shoes; all he cares about is money...that is what makes him happy."

> " 'Raisin in the Sun' was a small play; it felt more like a family. We all had the same mind set; we really connected more."
> -Ignoisco Miles

Miles played Walter Lee Younger, father of the house, with big get-rich-quick dreams.

To Walter, money was important not only to his personal happiness, but he felt it would improve his family life as well. It was a shock to all when Walter lost over half of the family's inheritance money, plunging the already shaken-family into even more distress.

As the grandmother, and rock of the family, senior Courtney Williams' character tried to hold the family together during this time of tension.

"When is the time to love someone the most?" Williams' character, Mama asked. This question, while seemingly minuscule, proved to sum up the entire play.

For Walter's wife, Ruth, how could she love her husband when she didnít support his dreams? For Benetha, his younger sister, how could she love her brother when he lost all of her college-tuition money? And for his mother, how could she continue to love her only son when he disgraced the family, lost their money, and brought continuous tension into the house? For Mama Younger it was simple, "That's what family does."

In one of the most climactic scenes of the play, Walter tells his family that he has lost his portion of the inheritance money. This scene, was not only a very dramatic part of the play but also called upon the actors to dig deep and use some of their own heart-felt emotions.

Dating is and always will be a staple in life. From first dates to horrible break-ups, dating is the sweet and sour of day-to-day living. It's the heartbreak that teaches us to smile through the tears and it's those special moments that teach us to love life and live in the moment. In high school the world of dating sheds new meaning to some, while others are after a long-term realationship and some are more interested in just having fun. Along with finding a suitable companion comes finding out what you like, don't like, and really finding who you are. High school couples became more than just boyfriend and girlfriend, but soon became the best of friends. It's no shock that high school is not easy and it's comforting to have someone that you can lean on.

The world of Dating

Allyson Reynolds

In the whirlwind world of dating, it is found that no two dates are alike. There are the dates that make you re-think dating and those that have you falling in love. The dating experience is more than just finding a suitable companion, it's about finding out who you are. What you like, what you don't like, what kind of person you want to date, and so forth. The vast world of dating is filled tons of hits and even mores misses. But in the end there are always more fish in the sea of love.

The Romantic Date

Dating without romance is like a fish without water. Taking a date out and treating him or her to something a little romantic is never wrong. Heading to our very own canal and renting a gondola for an hour was a popular and affordable date for students.

The Fun Date

It's always key to have fun when dating. Going to the extremes guaranteed an unforgettable date. Taking a road trip to Kings Island was a prime example of an unusual date. Spending the day riding coasters and topping it off with awesome fireworks, priceless.

The Classic Date

Sometimes it was nice just to stick with a classic date that included dinner and hitting up a movie. Students added a splash of creativity by hitting up an ethnic restaurant or checking out an indie film. There are reasons why a classic is a classic, it just works.

The Unusual Date

There were those dates that broke the monotomy of dating. Whether it was going to the zoo, a sporting event, or rock climbing. Going on a hot air balloon ride may be pricey ($625 for two people) but the 1 hour ride at 2,000 feet would forever be remembered.

Happily Ever After VS. Never Ever Again

It's a common fact that when you date you are going to find a perfect match or have your heart broken. Warriors talk about their experiences when it came to dating.

Happily Ever After

I was ice-skating with a girl I was dating and we skated at the rink until it closed telling stories. That night I hadn't smiled or laughed as much for and because of a girl in a long, long time. We have been happily together since January 29.

Mason Howard, 12

Never Ever Again

I dated Alex for about six months. One day he decided to hang out with a girl & not tell me, he ended up kissing the girl. I found out from other people and Alex lied to me about it. He is still dating that girl.

Jodi Willis, 9

Happily Ever After

After homecoming Shane took me to a park that was pretty far away. He got out a blanket and told me to pick a spot and had me close my eyes. Suddenly, I heard his guitar and he started playing and singing for me. It was the sweetest thing ever!

Arianna Russel, 11

Worst Pick up Lines

- "Hey, do you have any band-aids? Because I skinned my knees falling for you."

- "Do you have a map? I just keep getting lost in your eyes."
- "Do you believe in love at first sight or should I walk past again?"

Whitney's Way

"My fashion philosophy is to not be afraid to stand out and be sure to always wear what you want. My style is solely an expression of me, and it shows who I am. I don't care what people think of me and most people respect my willingness to be different. The store I depend on the most for clothes is Goodwill. They have cheap and unique pieces that you can't find anywhere else. At any thrift store, I like to buy scarves and shirts. I have also found dresses that I have used for special occasions. I pretty much just try to please my own sense of style."

TO WRITE LOVE

hope live

It was quite possibly the most devastating chain of events that ever happened at Warren Central. In the space of just a couple of week, Warren suffered the devastating losses of two students, 16-year-old Antonio Rivers and 17-year-old Mariah Broomfield, to suicide and PAC Director Matt Oskay, whose death was called an apparent suicide.

In wake of the tragedy a mandatory staff development training seminar was called to order from Phyllis Hazelwood. Joni Irwin from the Jason Foundation was brought in to offer guidance and outreach to those staff members and students that sought someone to talk to.

"There is hope out there," Irwin said, "a lot of hope out there."

She stressed the importance of coming together as a school and the necessity of teachers being proactive in identifying students who struggled with the tragedies.

Students found one way to cope with the suicides, simply by writing love on their arms. Senior Rebekah Dixon was among those who joined the popular movement that started with a group of concerned friends on a mission.

To Write Love On Her Arms (TWLOAH) started in 2006 by a group of caring friends wanting to raise the funds to send a cocaine-addicted and self-injuring teen to rehab. TWLOHA is now a worldwide movement.

TWLOHA gained force by selling T-shirts from their MySpace page and being fortunate enough to have famous bands like Switchfoot and Anberlin wear merchandise on stage, in the last two years TWLOHA responded to 80,000 messages from people in 40 different countries as they shared their personal message of hope and help at concerts, universities, festivals, and churches.

"I have known many people [who have gone through depression] and I have had some close friends commit suicide," Dixon said. "I believe that there is always a way to ask for help and I fully believe in suicide prevention."

For weeks students were seen walking up and down the halls, sitting in classrooms, and going on with their lives with LOVE written on their arms.

Even as the inks faded away, the message behind the four-letter word will always be with the students.

To Write Love On Her Arms was not only a national movement but was seen throughout Warren Central in wake of three suicides. TWLOHA found help and support "for people strugglng with depression, addication, self-injury and suicide," as outlined by their mission statement on the official website. Senior Rebekah Dixon was a youth TWLOHA represetative and made it her mission to spread the word. "TWLOHA is a great organization that is trying to spread a wonderful message: that with love and support, you can help and even save many people's lives," Dixon said.

A year marked by a bad economy had no effect on the outcome of students attending prom. Expensive dresses, top-notch stilettos, beautiful corsages and carriage rides acted as essentials for a night all students remember, prom.

"I went to prom junior year and thought about not going senior year to save money, but I knew I would regret my decision." senior Shelby Murdoch said, "Senior prom was so much more fun than junior prom and despite the money, I do not regret my decision."

Students bought new batteries for cameras to record every second, ensuring that they would never forget their memorable night. As fun, upbeat songs such as "Cotton Eyed Joe" played, girls took off their new heels and jumped on the dance floor, making sure they did not miss a moment of the fun.

Activities

RESPECT - learned, earned and returned; those exact words printed in bold on gold paper were posted in the majority of classrooms around Warren. However, most of the time, the slogan went unnoticed by students.

From promoting peace and safe driving, to collecting cash and selling buttons, organizations did everything possible to increase the amount of respect that was learned, earned and returned all around Warren.

Student Council kicked off the RESPECT campaign as members promoted safe driving with the "Keep the Drive" national teen movement. Rallies were held after school and safe driving flyers were passed out as an attempt to increase the safe driving among teens.

With safe driving flyers, jingles, parades and pledges, Student Council won second place in the "Keep the Drive" national contest.

Publications got involved with the campaign as staff members of the Warren Owl and Wigwam raised money to assist children and families with medical expenses.

Buttons were sold in an attempt to donate $500 to the Ronald McDonald Foundation in order to earn a spot on the heart wall located at the Ronald McDonald House.

The buttons were colorful, inexpensive, and promoted respect for children and their futures. "Respect The Future," was printed on the buttons. Each button cost $1 and all of the money raised went to The Ronald McDonald House.

Dedicated staff members even took three hours out of routines to help clean the Ronald McDonald House. Staff members spent two Saturdays in February cleaning and organizing pantries, kitchens and toys for families who could not afford to live at home due to the large amount of medical care needed for their children.

Every student who donated money to Ka$h 4 Kid$ or purchased a button received a raffle ticket and a free yearbook was raffled off on Warren Live.

WCTV also contributed to the RESPECT campaign by airing and advertising promos based on respect. The announcements provided ways to respect not only the school and the community, but other students and staff as well.

The Special Education students with Ms. Fitzgerald encouraged students to pick up scraps of paper and place them in trash cans located conveniently around the Warrior Nation instead of throwing them on the floor. Recycling bins were placed in every classroom and each hall had a different pick up day. Special Education students collected the bins daily.

The RESPECT campaign was something that many activities were involved in. Each organization showed the Warrior Nation how to learn, earn and return respect.

"Appreciation is a wonderful thing; it makes what is excellent in others belong to us as well."

tools for schools

helping children in Uganda get school supplies

Nothing in this world beats the look on an underprivileged child's face when he or she is handed a simple gift or food is put on the table.

Nothing tops the warmth felt when a that child laughs or smiles. Tools for Schools strived to accomplish those things.

Tools for Schools was a non-for-profit organization that helped the children of Uganda, Mexico, and the community.

In Uganda, the children have a choice: food or school. To make matters worse, the Lord's Resistance Army rebelled against the government and made the children fight for their cause.

Tools for Schools hit the ground running this year when they sold T-shirts for $10 each. In all, they raised over $1,000 through that fundraiser, which was one of many to come.

"Not only do we help the organization by providing funds, but we get the community to help aid this international problem," senior Hillary Larman said.

Along with community service, the organization has two benefits a year to raise awareness and funds for the cause.

The four officers, seniors Michael Murphy, Kami Spicklemire, Liz Presley, and Hilary Larman, along with Mr. Gomez, the sponsor of the Warren Central chapter of T4S, hoped to take a trip to Uganda in the summer of 2009.

"We will be participating in the reconstructing of a schoolhouse," Larman said. "We will also be giving them supplies."

Tools for Schools tried to inspire the children of Uganda and let them know that they are not alone.

"We may not be able to change their lives or their situations, but the least we can do is make them smile for one day," Gomez said.

> "We may not be able to change their lives, but the least we can do is make them smile."

Q: What is your favorite part about being invloved in Tools for Schools?
A: It's knowing that I am making a difference.

Q: What is something that we would never guess about T4S?
A: T4S is actually a national organization and Warren is just a branch of it.

Q: What skills and talents go into preparation for T4S?
A: Organization, leadership and creativity.

keep the drive

student council members work to save teenage drivers

Fourteen teenagers die in car crashes everyday. This frightening yet very true statistic was pounded into the brains of students all around the Warrior Nation.

Student Council worked hard to save teen drivers everywhere by supporting the Keep the Drive campaign, which was a national teen movement that was dedicated to protecting teens when driving.

Keep the Drive sponsored many national contests and it encouraged smart driving for teenagers. The movement was dedicated to helping teens protect their futures, friends, and driving freedoms.

Keep the Drive educated teen students on the benefits of safe driving. However, this movement was in no way, shape, or form another dull Drivers Education Course. There were no teachers or adult advisors in charge; it was all led by the students. Keep the Drive provided real situations, statistics, and stories told by teenagers.

> "Keep the Drive has taught us the importance of safe driving. "
> -Mychael Spencer

Student Council members got involved by attending a two-hour seminar at Lucas Oil Stadium on Thursday, October 16, 2008. The seminar influenced the members to create a school campaign and share statistics with other students. Balloons, banners and candy were all apart of the Keep the Drive rallies that were held after school.

StuCo members pushed the Keep the Drive movement even further as officers went to the student parking lots and put flyers on each and every windshield. Each of the flyers contained a safe driving trivia question. The answer to the question was revealed live on the morning announcements that same day.

Any driving student who was paying attention to the morning announcements submitted their flyer along with their answer; if that student had the correct answer, his or her name was put into a drawing to receive a prize. Senior Anita Watkins won and received a $25 credit to the bookstore.

"Keep the Drive has been a great experience for Student Council members; it has taught us the importance of safe driving," Student Council President Mychael Spencer said, "Car crashes are the number one killers of teens, so we have to prevent these crashes from happening."

With safe driving tips, flyers, and jingles, Student Council came in second place in the National Keep the Drive Contest. Not only did Keep the Drive reward Student Council with $5,000 but it also earned the organization more than 250 StuCo members who pledged to become cautious drivers.

chaos theory

spinning flags creates utter chaos

"Warren Central, are you ready?" the male announcer with a booming voice said through the mic.

One of the girls gave him the small yet noticeable signal that the guard was in fact ready. "Then please welcome the Warren Central High School Winter Guard performing 'Chaos Theory'," the announcer said with another earth-shattering boom. An explosion of applause erupted from the crowd.

The Winter Guard has always left a mark each year that it has performed, and this year wasn't any different. Last year, the guard went from open guard to world guard, the highest rank in the entire guard world.

On a cold Thursday in the short month of February, the guard left a bustling Warren Central at 5:30 pm to perform at the Winter Guard International Power Regional located in Nashville, Tennessee. There, they competed in world-class competition, ready for a second year to show the world what it was made of.

Once in Tennessee, the guard lived it up like rock stars when they checked into their hotel rooms. For practices in between performances, the guard was assigned to a designated area in the host high school at a designated time.

The starvation for another championship definitely showed when the girls gracefully entered the performance area. The first day ended with an incredible score of 76.9, granting them the second place spot.

The story didn't end there. On the second day in Nashville, the girls put out more energy, landing them in the second place spot again, but now with a score of 78.9. The guard thrived on improving its score each and every time it performs, even if it's just by a couple of points.

"I absolutely love it when we do that," said junior Samantha George. "It shows our ability as a team and all our hard work."

> "I absolutely love it when we improve each time we perform."

Q: What is your favorite thing about guard?
A: I love to perform a different show each year and bond with my teammates on long bus rides to far-away schools.

Q: Are you going to continue guard after high school?
A: I'm not entirely sure right now, but I think I will.

Q: What was your initial reason for joining guard?
A: I can't think of only one main reason why because there are just so many!!!

[march to the beat]

preparation was key for band performance

Summer band practice started this season on May 19, with a slightly different focus than in past years.

In addition to band's regularly grueling schedule, the Gold Brigade was invited to perform at the opening of the latest addition to the downtown Indianapolis skyline, Lucas Oil Stadium.

"We basically started our regular summer rehearsals with a bit more intensity in order to get ready for the early performance," marching band director Mr. John Hilmer said.

Preparation for this event and the regular band season required intense practice. Practices began even before the previous school year had ended and rehearsals ran from early May up until the beginning of August.

The Gold Brigade Band had a total of 21 strenuous summer practices. The length of the rehearsals ran from 2 to 12 hours per day. The rehearsals consisted of regular practices, pre-band camp, band camp, parent previews and post-band camp.

Gold Brigade also ran camps during the summer to help the students stay focused for the performance. At the beginning of July, the band had pre-band camp which prepared them for the tough band-camp that was soon to follow.

The invitation to Lucas Oil Stadium came from a previous performance at a Colts game. Based on this performance, the Warren Central Marching Band was honored with the invitation.

Band put together a stunning show for its large audience. Members performed the Warrior fight song and Block 4, which was a warm up drill. Block 4 was used as a movement for the background songs.

"It was a life changing experience," freshman Kavonna Chowning said. "I had mixed emotions of excitement and nervousness."

Approximately 128 band members attended and performed at the grand opening of Lucas Oil Stadium.

Feedback from the performance was positive, and band members claimed that the experience of being the first band ever to perform at this venue was something each band member would never forget.

Q: What skills and talents go into preparation for honors band?
A: Reading and memorizing music, playing an instrument and endurance.

Q: What is something that we would never guess about honors band?
A: Everyone in it is unique and their own person. Basically, not everyone is a band geek.

Q: Are you going to continue with band?
A: Only time will tell.

RAISE YOUR HANDS! Hi-Lites singers perform for friends and family at the Parent Preview in October. The show choir was in the top 15 in the state.

sing it out loud

some danced it out and some acted it, they sang it

Things kicked off a little differently at the beginning of the year for the Warren Central choirs.

When former choir teacher Todd Hawks resigned at the end of the 2007-2008 school year, all the students who were close to him were saddened, but they soon welcomed their new teacher Ms. Victoria Bassett.

Bassett was a graduate of Indiana University Bloomington. When asked what got her into choir, she answered simply, "My choir director in high school was an inspiring teacher," Bassett said. "He taught me to love music."

It was now up to Bassett and Mr. Dustin Podgorski, who also taught choir, to produce the successful choirs that they knew could be made. Bassett wasted absolutely no time in jumping right into her role as the newest addition to the WC staff.

Each choir worked diligently for months on end, determined to make it to the top three at state on March 21. Tiring, intense and extensive practices took place almost every night of the week from 6 to 9 at night. There was even a Parent Preview in the Warren Performing Arts Center in early October to showcase how well the choir students had been doing so far.

Not only did it take the amazing teaching skills of Bassett and Podgorski to make the choirs successful, but it took the drive and determination of the choir students to achieve it as well. Their hard work definitely showed.

At the Indiana State School Music Association, (ISSMA), the Connection, Vivace, and Hi-Lites show choirs all received gold ratings in singing. Connection and Vivace received gold in sight reading while Hi-Lites received silver. It was a very busy Valentine's Day because ISSMA was held at Warren from very early in the morning to very late at night.

"I didn't even get home until, like, one in the morning," senior Hope England said.

"Warren students are phenomenal," Basset said. "I always enjoy how hard my students want to work and how much passion and drive they have for music."

Q: How long have you been in Connection Show Choir?
A: I have been in choir for 3 years now.

Q: What skills go into preparing for Connection?
A: You have to be confident and have pride in yourself.

Q: What's the most difficult part about Connection?
A: It's learning how to deal with other people.

beautifully orchestrated

music is what happens in between the notes

Sitting up straight with their feet placed flat on the ground, the orchestra students eagerly waited to learn under the direction of Chapman University's Dr. Grace Fong.

Dr. Fong was a graduate of the Cleveland Institute of Music. Fong completed double majors in piano performance, public policy and management/health care management, and she had a minor in business.

She has also played all over the world at many major venues for a lot of different people. She was awarded with the Renaissance Scholar Prize, and she is now teaching a keyboard study class at Chapman University.

Fong came to Warren all the way from Orange County, California, to teach the orchestra students more technique and poise. Fong and orchestra director Mr. Gradon Emmert's expertise helped the orchestra students excel in many ways in the school year.

"They were all very professional, prepared, and at a very high level of playing," Fong said. "I'd never seen an orchestra be raised and lowered like that!"

Although Fong's stay only lasted a week, the lessons she thought will be carried with those students throughout their entire orchestra days. Fong's exquisite teaching style had all the students wanting to learn more from her.

"Mr. Emmert works so well with the students and knows exactly what they need," Fong said about being able to teach alongside Emmert.

Fong and Emmert's teaching skills helped the symphony orchestra make it to the Indiana State School Music Association (ISSMA). On May 2, the Symphony Orchestra performed at Perry Meridian High School in order to qualify for the state finals competition. The honor is only bestowed upon the top eight orchestras in the state each year. The orchestra received seventh at state.

CURVE IT UP. A club against drinking, drugs and tobacco stand up for their rights to say no. Just Say No members line up in a shape of a ribbon for Orange Ribbon Week to make a statement.

just say no

students go above and beyond to say no to drugs

He was slow, small and green; and although he was no ninja turtle, he was an extremely determined turtle representing the Just Say No Club.

Turtle power played an important role for Just Say No members as each individual member used turtles to inspire and lead students away from harmful substances. Bright orange ribbons and t-shirts displayed turtle slogans such as "Turtle Power," and " I don't need alcohol to have a happy hour."

More than 200 devoted members wearing orange shirts and ribbons worked hard to get students involved with the festivities of Orange Ribbon Week as members handed out orange ribbons. Stories were told on Warren Live about teens killed in accidents caused by drunk drivers.

The stories influenced students to stay away from drugs and alcohol as they were all a part of the traditional Grim Reaper Day. Students dressed in all black and witnessed a day of silence as each member represented someone who died due to drunk driver.

Orange suckers were passed out in the bookstore to students who pledged to remain drug-free.

"We are out there spreading the word," Just Say No Advisor Deniece Carmean said. "We want to bring awareness to others in school."

"I joined Just Say No to take a stand against peer pressure that high school students are faced with everyday," Just Say No Vice President Jackie McQueen said.

"My favorite part of Just say No is seeing so many Warren Central Students come together at the meetings all for a common goal."

"Enjoy life drug free, support a friend, and it's not cool to break the law," Mr. Greenlee said. This was Mr. Greenlee's motto throughout the whole year.

Q: Why did you choose to be in Just Say No?
A: It's fun, and I'm able to get the word out about not doing drugs.

Q: How do you benefit from being in Just Say No and why?
A: I benefit in a good way because I prevent people from doing drugs and alcohol.

Q: What's interesting about Just Say No?
A: You meet new people and make new friends.

STRIKE A POSE! The night of Class Clown, the fun monkeys performed the skit "Slide Show." The skit had the players slide into different positions in a limited time. photo / Brittaney Wright what is a fun monkey?

is it simply just a funny monkey, or is it more?

"A fun monkey is an outcast, yet fits in perfectly," senior Michael Murphy said. "It loves everyone and loves to make people laugh."

At Fun Monkey shows, crazy skits and hilarious scenes were performed strictly by improvisation. Team members did everything from rapping to posing at random times during the show. The laughter never lacked at shows.

A fun monkey was also someone who could think on his or her feet. The Fun Monkey shows were modeled around comedian Drew Carey's "Whose Line Is It Anyway?" The shows were heavily dependent on audience participation.

The more audience members that attended, the more suggestions could possibly be called out. The more suggestions that were possibly called out, the more suggestions the performers had to choose from to perform. Since nobody knew what anyone was going to say, the shows always had a huge variety of hilarious skits.

Since choir and drama classes had first dibs on booking the studio theatre, Fun Monkey shows were often inbetween. At $3 a ticket, the Fun Monkey team packed the house with an eager audience who was excited for its suggestions to be possibly acted out.

Because Fun Monkey was 100 percent improvisational, each show was different, which for some, was the sole reason why he or she attended.

"I use improv everyday because life is basically just improvisation," senior Adam Young said.

Q: What is your favorite part of being involved in Fun Monkey?
A: It is the most fun group I am involved with at Warren. It's a good time where I can display my talents and share my humor with other people.

Q: What was your initial reason for joining Fun Monkey?
A: I liked performing for people and I was always quick on my feet and I could apply that to create hilarious situatons.

Q: How long have you been in Fun Monkey?
A: Since my freshman year.

OH, I'M FIDO! Senior Yussef Abdelhak and junior Logan Moore practice their state winning memorized duo piece "Fido." This was their first year performing a memorized duo together.

was developing the ability to win state

Black suits, black books, dressy shoes, and state rings: all these components came together to make a determined speech team.

In the wee hours of the morning on Saturday, March, 21, the speech team gathered at 5 am to practice in the commons for an hour before hopping on a bus to head to North Central High School. North Central was only a short 20 minutes away, but the ride seemed like hours for the more-than-ready team.

Over time the Warren Speech Team won their third state championship in three years with two individual state champions to add to the equation. This season, the team's main goal was to get all 36 entries at sectionals to final round, so that each team member could make it to state. Only 35 entries made it to final round at sectionals, but that didn't get Head Coach Scott Black down. "Each year we improve." Black said. "Thirty-five entries is more than we have ever gotten to final round at sectionals."

One of the individual state-winning pieces was an irresistibly funny memorized duo called "Fido." It won state and earned more sweepstake points for the Warriors. Performed by senior Yussef Abdelhak and junior Logan Moore, "Fido" racked up awesome scores throughout the long and exhausting day at North Central.

This was both Yusseff and Logan's second year on the speech team, and the duo proved powerful. They plowed through the season, getting themselves to the final round at each competition.

At the state awards ceremony, with hands held tight together, the Warren Central speech team waited for the announcement of state champion. Warren Central placed second in state but placed first in the 3A division.

"Money doesn't grow on trees." Who hasn't heard that one before?

Society has taught young Americans that money is important- it can make or break you. Education is the key to success, and without anything beyond a high school diploma, that deeply-desired success would be unattainable.

Ask seniors what's been on their mind for the past year and the answer will be college.

It begins with the SATs, then the submitting of applications. The ever-looming FAFSA deadline quickly approaches as students scrambled to fill out their financial aid forms. For students lucky enough to be accepted to their "top pick" school, the next step is a tough one- figuring out how to pay.

"Getting accepted is one thing, and paying for your dream school is something totally different," guidance counselor Susie Long said. "For most students, getting in isn't the problem, it is the money that gets them."

Although many students met the FAFSA deadline, they did not continue with their scholarship search.

"There is no doubt about it, the money is out there. Many students just don't put enough effort into finding it," Long said.

In 2008, FAFSA gave out $144 billion in student financial aid. So this brings up the question, if there was all of this money, why were so many seniors struggling to pay for college?

For senior Kelsey Coram, paying for college wasn't a big concern, but it was which school to pick that proved to be the difficult task. Coram was offered a $36,000 scholarship to Indiana University paying for the majority of her schooling.

While to most this would sound like a dream, it was a big surprise when Ball State University came knocking at her door.

Coram received a scholarship from Ball State University, which would pay for half of her tuition.

"My top pick is definitely Ball State," Coram said. "That is why I applied for their Whitinger scholarship. If I get it, I will have a full ride."

While many students aren't as lucky as Coram, they still had the opportunity to get creative with their scholarship ideas.

Senior Anna Marie Hosei was one of those seniors who got creative and used the popular social networking site, Facebook, to score a scholarship.

Hosei hoped to be one of the 64 students awarded a $20,000 scholarship from Zinch.com, a scholarship and college information site. In order to win, applicants needed to embody the zinch motto: "students are more than just a test score."

Hosei created a group on Facebook where fellow friends could join, boosting her popularity, which according to their website was another much needed credential to make it all the way to the $20,000.

While Hosei didn't get the scholarship, her group did acquire over 2,000 members. "If I could give any piece of advice to an incoming senior it would be to start applying for scholarships early, you won't regret all the time you spent on them later," Hosei said.

"Learning is an active process. We do by learning...only knowledge that is used sticks in your mind."

Media Moguls

Students find comfort in the midst of tradgedy

It was the kind of juicy story every news-media looks for- everyone but the staff of the Warren Owl, that is.

Coming back from a weekend trip to St. Louis for a national journalism convention, members of the student media had to face the ugly tragedy of the third school-related suicide in less than a month. It was the kind of tragedy that no one looks forward to covering, but editors Adria Steuer and Matt Spears knew it couldn't be ignored.

With less than two weeks before press and a graphics-editor who suddenly quit, staff members had a difficult decision to make on just how to cover the tragic events. "It was really crazy. We were thrown a huge curveball all of the sudden," Spears said.

Rather than focusing on the horrific details of the three loses, staff members came up with a different approach- a healing approach. "Instead of focusing on when it happened, why it happened and how it happened, we focused on what the school was doing to help everyone cope with it," Steuer said. Counselors were brought onto the campus to help grieving students and teachers were encouraged to reach out to those who seemed to be struggling during this time. "We had to figure out how to cover it the right way," Steuer said. "We didn't want to sensationalize it, but we also didn't want to hide anything."

After deciding on the manor in which the events would be covered, the next topic at hand was to decide who would cover it. Eventually, it was determined that because of its weight, Steuer, the front page editor, would take charge of the story.

Because of personal issues and family history, Steuer was reluctant at first. "Can I do this story justice in the time that I have, will I be able to remain objective, can I handle the emotional weight that comes along with it?" Before taking on this project these were all questions Steuer had to ask herself, finally concluding with, "Everyone would always like to have more time to do a story the right way- you do what you can in the time you're give, and hope it's for the best."

Because of the story's controversial nature, staff members were worried about the student reaction to it's delicate topic. "We tried not to step on people's toes or hurt raw feelings," Steuer said. "It felt good not to have people criticize us."

A Real Hair Raiser

Cosmetology Center puts sass back into class

Fighting their way through the crowded halls, dressed in a black protective jacket, with a head under their arms- it wasn't a scene from the latest scary movie, it was Cosmetology students on their way to class.

What went on behind the doors of the Cosmetology Center? In class, students worked on nails, hair, gave facials, and all that consists of a makeover.

During the school day, students who had mastered the hair on the fake heads practiced on their fellow classmates. "I hate working on the mannequins," Raven Henry said. "It's harder to form the hair like you want to."

Since 2002, the Cosmetology Center has been adding sass and style to the Warren community. Over 100 students who have taken the Indiana State Cosmetology Exam have graduated from the two-year program and received their Cosmetology license.

"It's a good experience to see where they start and how far they have come when they complete the program," Ms. Debra Conte, the director of the Cosmetology Center, said.

Students were trained daily to style, cut and color hair, while other students were taught how to give facials and manicures. The assignments were nerve-racking, especially when they worked on clients they didn't know. "I was nervous but excited at the same time," Henry said.

Students stayed after, Tuesday through Thursday, until 4:10 to complete assignments and get in the needed hours to pass the class. One Saturday a month, the center was open to the public. The Cosmetology Center brought in 40-60 clients.

The work students did helped the clients feel better about themselves. They assisted those who came in by finding the style their clients wanted. Cosmetology students did whatever they could to make them look great.

Everything the students learned in their first year was carried over into their second year. The book work grew harder, as they learned new chapters. With every minute passing by a new technique was learned.

The students, as well as the teachers, enjoyed the class. All the Cosmetology teachers agreed, that it was a fun class to teach, and something they loved to do. They connected with their students and helped as often as they could.

Show Me the Money

New Finance Center helps teach students the value of a dollar

It's 2:50 p.m., Monday afternoon. That freshly signed paycheck has just been handed off and is ready to be cashed. Your first thought is the long line waiting for you at the bank after school.

The opening of the new Finance Center Federal Credit Union meant no more long lines or waiting at the bank. The Automatic Teller Machine could do any thing that the teller could do from withdraws to deposits.

Of course, that wasn't the only reason the ATM was a good resource for students. The ATM distributed 20s, 10s, 5s and 1s, along with change like nickels, and pennies.

Before students could use the machine, they had to set up an account with Ms. Tara Turner, Director of Financial Literacy.

This opportunity gave the Warrior Nation a new and creative way to learn the value of a dollar. Turner was on campus at all times to help students.

"This generation will be way ahead on their financial knowledge," Turner said. Students could set up an account so that they could save their money or withdraw from an on-campus ATM located in the Walker Career Center. As of the first semester 150 accounts had been opened.

The Academy of Finance, a class open to juniors and seniors, taught students about different types of financial accounts and increased their financial literacy. Students taking the class were also offered the opportunity to work in the Finance Center. Doing so was how they received their economic credit. Two Warriors who devoted much of their time to the Finance Center were Olivia Schaefer and Nicole Smith. These students not only worked at the school branch but also worked outside of school at a different Finance Center Federal Credit Union.

Warren, along with Arsenal Tech, started the new program that gave juniors a chance to receive their economic credit early.

Mix It Up

Show us what you're made of

A crowded cafeteria, students buzz around having loud conversations, anxiously looking for a place to sit. Custodians push heavy trash cans across the room while more students find empty seats and sit down next to people who don't look familiar.

This wasn't the first day of school or the experience of a new student in the massive cafeteria. This was Mix It Up.

Mix It Up was a social awareness movement presented by the Art Department. It encouraged students to expand outside of their normal social parameters and do something that frightens teenagers down to their core... sitting with complete strangers at lunch.

"No one really goes outside of their friends, sports groups, or even cliques when they are in the cafeteria," Ashley Carr, member of the National Art Honors Society, said. "We just want everybody to make a new friend and for the respect level to go up."

Mix It Up began in 2002 in a Montgomery, Alabama, school and seemed to fit perfectly in the diverse Warren community.

With the battle lines drawn in the cafeteria, students armed with orange bracelets and sack lunches in hand braced themselves for a new mealtime experience.

"It was a little nerve-wracking at first, but after a while you just realize that they are students too," senior Daniel Schilling said.

Picking up where Student Council left off, the NAHS welcomed the Campaign for Respect with open arms.

"We chose Mix It Up because NAHS is a very diverse group and we wanted something to represent that," NAHS member, Mary Beth Spindler said.

Although many students didn't reciprocate the same feelings about the movement, the feelings of Dr. Sally Rice, leader of the NAHS, remained unchanged.

"Mix It Up relies on the self-discipline of students, not participating, I mean they just have to sit there and let the thing happen around them," Rice said.

Gray's Anatomy

Students take a creative approach to learning about the human body

Leaning over the small tray, scalpel in hand, she began to peel back the soft tissue surrounding the eye. Slicing through its delicate layers, her partner located the retina, marking it with a toothpick.

This gruesome task was not the job of a medical examiner or the local ophthalmologist; it was just another day for students in Mr. Gray's Human Body Systems class.

Human Body Systems began this year and was a continuation of the medical-based class Principles of Biomedical Studies. These courses prepared future doctors, psychologists and nurses for their long studies in medical school.

While many science classes seemed to take an "all talk, no action" approach, students were encouraged to explore and take a look at the physical aspects the human body has to offer.

Throughout the year, students learned about various body systems, and after many lessons attempted to replicate parts like the brain, spinal cord and the kidneys, along with their adrenal glands.

The organs and other body parts didn't go to waste. They were used inside mannequins that students were given at the beginning of the year. These mini-human replicas, which they could name and personalize, were scaled to size from their cranium down to their metatarsals.

"Making the parts and putting them in the mannequins was really fun," said senior Shelby Murdoch. "It was fun to be that creative in a science class."

Not only did they have the opportunity to modify their own mannequins, students also had the opportunity to build life-size replicas of a human digestive system.

Beginning with mouths formed from clay, students were encouraged to get creative and come up with unconventional ideas to add a bit of personality to their projects.

"We used costume vampire teeth in ours," senior Allyson Reynolds said. "I know that some people used Chiclets, and others just used clay." The mouth wasn't the only place students got creative; there were also stomach-socks and digestive tracks made out of yarn. "It's kind of hard to imagine how all of these things came together to make a digestive tract, but they really did look real after we were done," Murdoch said.

While yarn and clay may seem a little elementary, when it came down to it, HBS students learned more than your average kindergartner. With their advanced knowledge of the human body, students left the classroom feeling prepared for almost anything medical school could throw their way.

Set It Up: Kasey Ferbrache helps her partner, Ashley Bateman, set up the first part of their lab. Students used balloons to show how the heart's rhythmic beats pumped blood throughout the body.

Pump It Out: Placing just the right amount of pressure on the balloon, Michelle Alcorn releases air into a piece of tubing. In this experiment, Alcorn, along with other students, tried to displace water from one beaker into another.

Look Who's Talking: Joining the other children, Sable Rivers brings her baby sister to class for AP Psychology's Baby Day. Students and staff members brought in their children and family members so students could interact with real children.

Pushing It To The Limit

Students test their potential through AP classes

Bonnie and Clyde, John Nash and Charles Manson. Aside from their infamous names, these people had something else in common. All were research topics for AP Psychology.

Moving past the bizarre nature of their acts, students had to look deeper into their motives to find the reason behind their madness. While not all of the subject's students could research were felons, according to Ms. Mary Jane Smith, students found the homicidal maniacs and serial killers much more interesting.

Students extensively researched the person of their choice and presented a project to the class. This project consisted of a diagnosis, personal fact sheet, and a visual aid. While many students took the popular "poster route" some chose to take a more creative approach.

One student who really got into the spirit of the project was Roberta LaFevers, who recreated the tragic Susan Tate murder scene committed by the Charles Manson family in California in 1969.

LaFevers built a replica of the Tate's California mansion, complete with a woodland area beside the house and a miniature deceased Tate.

Students who chose not research a specific person could also research a topic, like mothers who kill. Two popular mothers in this category were Andrea Yates and Susan Smith. Yates drowned all five of her children in the bathtub of her home and Smith is serving life in prison for murdering her two children.

Students who chose to research people with psychological disorders may have chosen John Nash, who was a very brilliant man of game theory, differential geometry, and partial differential equations but at the same time had schizophrenia. Another popular subject was Karen Carpenter from the famous singing duet "The Carpenters" who suffered from anorexia nervosa causing her early death from heart failure at the age of 32.

Students who took AP Psychology were better educated by studying some of the world's most intriguing psychological disorders.

Happy Anniversary

The PAC celebrates 25 years and many more to come

I am known as home to the many students in the WCHS Drama Department; I have held hundreds of plays and musicals and I celebrated my 25th birthday. I am the Warren Performing Arts Center.

I first opened September 23, 1983 for the wonderful comedian, Shelley Berman. Since that day, I have hosted major plays such as "Evita" and had dreams of sugar plum fairies in the Christmas-favorite the "Nutcracker Ballet" which was put on by the Indianapolis Ballet Theatre. Brenda Lee sang "I'm Sorry" and world-famous Flamenco guitarist Carlos Montoya played his spicy Latin melodies for an audience who packed the house, filling 1,000 seats.

Not only do I cater to dramatic pursuits, my stage also played host to gubernatorial debates and Mayor Greg Ballard addressed the student body at a very important 2008 Student Council meeting.

My acoustically perfect walls are wonderful for the many choir, band and orchestral performances that I host each year. Ask the New Kids on the Block, who tromped across my stage for their sprinkler-blowing performance.

Being the first "auditorium" of my kind in Indiana, my construction really set the bar high for other schools. I must thank the superintendent and the school board for the key role they have played in keeping me in such excellent condition.

Recently I have enjoyed filling my seats showing musicals like "Aida" and the Disney classic, "Beauty and the Beast".

Although I have calmed down a bit since my younger years, I still enjoy holding my title as the "largest stage in Indy," and watching students work hard behind and on my stage.

In high school, Greg Graham was the top-scorer for the Warriors with 493 points as a sophomore, led the Warriors to back-to-back sectional titles, was nominated for Indianaís Mr. Basketball as a senior and was selected to play in the McDonald's All-American game.

In his collegiate days, Graham played under one of the greatest coaches of all-time, Bob Knight. While Graham was at Indiana University, the Hoosiers won two Big Ten Conference Championships and made an appearance in the Final Four.

During his stint in the NBA, Graham played for four teams and made the NBA playoffs with the Seattle Supersonics in the 1996-1997 season.

Graham's coaching days began in 2005 with an ABA (American Basketball Association) expansion team, the Indiana Alley Cats. He coached the Alley Cats for one season, leading them to a 27-4 record and the second-highest winning percentage in ABA history.

For 2008-2009 Warrior squad though, success has been hard to come by.

"There have been a lot of highs and lows, but it was expected," Graham said. "Everyone knows that this is a work in progress."

After starting off with a 4-5 record, the Warriors got hot during the Marion County Tournament but came up short of the County title in a 75-65 loss to Class 4A No. 4 North Central.

Since the win against 3A Brebeuf Jesuit in the semi-final of the Marion County Tournament, the Warriors lost nine in a row, which guarnteed them just the second regular season losing record in the last 15 years.

"After getting a few games under our belt, I think we are right where we should be," Graham said. "We are not an elite team, but we are not a bottom dweller either."

A season like that was a new territory for many Warriors. The last losing season for the Warriors came in the 2004-2005 school year, when they finished with a 10-11 record after losing in the first round of sectionals.

Although Graham had great success in his high school and college playing days, he has had his fair share of tough seasons.

Graham played his first two NBA seasons for the Philadelphia 76ers, both losing seasons. Midway through his third season, the 76ers traded Graham to the New Jersey Nets, who then finished out the year with a record of 30-52.

Graham's high school and college days are a great example of what hard work and dedication can lead to, but right now the Warriors must focus on Graham's lessons in how to deal with losing and rebounding from losses.

"I am trying to let these guys find their own ways to deal with losing," Graham said. "The important thing that I hope these guys realize is that this is not just about basketball. It is about life."

It will be from his experience and his messages that the Warriors will have to draw from in order to be competitive yearly against the likes of Cathedral, North Central, Ben Davis and Lawrence North.

"The important thing that I hope these guys realize is that this is not just about basketball. It is about life."

Little mistakes made it hard for Warriors to convert

Warriors end season against Ben Davis in Regional finals

Warren had dominated in every game against the Giants since the loss to them in the 2002 regional championship game. The question was, could the Warriors keep that recent win streak against the Giants in tact?

Momentum was on the side of Ben Davis coming into the game after they had defeated Carmel 24-17 just three weeks before the Regional game against "The Beasts from the East".

The Warriors had an outstanding record against the Giants and had defeated them 42-12 in regular season play, but they knew that this wouldn't be easy.

Two crippling fumbles, a Hart interception in Warrior territory and a downpour all in one night? Doesn't sound like a good night for Warrior football.

"One play can usually cost the ball game," Coach John Hart said.

Even though the stats from the Carmel game gave the impression that the Warriors could have smashed the Greyhounds with just a few coordinated plays, this is not the first time the Warriors lost a game because of a few key preventable mistakes made.

In that game on October 3 the Warriors had three interceptions and two fumbles which cost the win, and handed us our first loss of the season.

Then in the embarrassing loss to Center Grove, the Warriors had to rethink the basics. With gapping holes and a seeming loss of focus, the Warriors went home with loss number two and were back to the drawing board.

Even though they made some detrimental plays to give games away, they also knew when to put the game away and bring home the W.

The defense really came out and held off the Fishers Tigers in the second-round of the Sectional tournament. They held Fishers to only 27 points. The Tigers only had the opportunity to rush for 127 yards and only 27 passing yards.

Yes, penalties were plentiful, 11 on the night, for 103-yards, but the offensive line provided good blocks to allow Eric Williams and George Cheesebourough to drive through and combine for 288-yards.

In the Sectional final game against the Lawrence Central Bears, a key 44-yard TD run from junior Jamal Bolden put the game away and the Warriors regained the Sectional trophy after a shocking loss to Hamilton Southeastern in the sectional finals the year before.

Unfortunately, the Warriors couldn't hold back the Giants. Rushing was the key to the game. Fifty-six carries for 345 for the purple Giants, while the Warriors had a measly 170 yards. Williams had two fumbles recovered by the Giants for touchdowns. Even so, the Giants had four fumbles with two recovered by the Warriors.

The Warriors handed the Regional trophy to them after the fourth quarter and a 23-45 defeat.

"We have to realize Warren's not on top anymore," offensive lineman Zach Graves said. "There are no more Darren Evans, Jewel Hamptons or Dexter Taylors. We have to work as a team and get back on top."

Overall, the Warriors did what they wanted to this season; they handled adversity instead of pointing fingers when the game didn't go the way they had hoped.

"Sometimes when you look forward to next year you can either look at what you lost or look at who we have coming back," Hart said. "I'm confident in what we have coming back."

Runners keep the drive alive with dedication and hard work through the season

There are few experiences in life that compare favorably to waking up at 6 a.m. to wander around a cold, wet, cow pasture, trying to convert to an aerobic state.

To those who do it, running is a road to self-awareness and reliance. Runners learn the harsh reality of their physical and mental limitations.

Dedication and passion are the biggest factors in what it takes to be a successful cross country runner. It takes dedication to wake up early each morning during summer break to run long miles while classmates are just beginning to fall asleep.

It's not just the training that makes one a good runner, it is also the determination that and mental strength that one possesses.

Before the actual competition begins, runners jog nervously out to the starting line waiting for a man in stripes to decide when it's time to roll. He fires off the gun, and then they spend about 15 to 20 minutes running their hearts out while listening to the screaming of fans and the hot heavy panting of boys jammed in tightly all around. Gradually, they have to push themselves to the extreme to pass the next runners in front.

Winners have to go into a deep grave of pain and there is no way out. Everyone is counting on you and everyone is watching you. There are no half time, no time outs, and no substitutions.

The boys took on a hard season. With the leading runner senior Caleb Pack not being able to compete at the beginning of the season due to an ankle injury, the boys all had to step it up.

Senior Ryan Daugherty was able to do just that. He pulled the team together and trained really hard. He led the team to the best of his abilities.

"It was disappointing to be hurt at the beginning of the season, but our team was able to stick together and run strong," Pack said.

The boys ran hard throughout the season, but came up short when it came down to the semi state meet, where they placed eighth overall. They accomplished their goal of the five scoring runners having a time under 17 minutes.

They ended their season with an enourmous amount of passion and dedication. They showed a lot of potential throughout the season.

"Six of our runners made the all-sectional team and five of our runners were able to make it to the all regional team," Coach Joe Brooks said. "I am very proud of all their efforts throughout the season."

Record breaking speed

Girls cross country team finds a leader in Rebekah Jones, who set a new school record

Setting records is nothing new for the girls cross country team. In the previous season, junior Breauna Turner set a 5k record of 19:58.

As of 2008 a new name was put in the record books, Rebekah Jones.

The junior broke the record by 6 seconds with a time of 19:52.

Jones was one of the only upperclassmen to run varsity.

Her hard work paid off when she broke the record at the MIC Invitational.

"Although it was only by a few seconds, I feel like I had accomplished something," Jones said.

Two other ladies, sophomore Kelly Hodges and freshman Haley Baughman broke 20 minutes. Hodges ran a 19:54 and Baughman ran a 19:55.

"We have a lot of talent on our team and a couple of ladies got really close to the record, but I'm glad to know that I have it this year," Jones said.

With the help of those ladies and the rest of the team, the lady Warriors placed fourth out of eight at the MIC Invitational.

After missing six months for a stress fracture in her foot, Jones returned to her team. She worked all through track season and during the summer she practiced twice a day. Working hard changed her form and also it gave her more confidence to push herself.

Not only was Jones a hard worker, she was a leader.

"She always led by example," head coach Jennifer Jensen said. "She would do anything you asked her to do, with 100 percent effort."

Jones would do things that helped to make a successful team.

Looking ahead to the future, the team expects the newly set record to be broken.

"Next season I hope to be under 19 minutes," Jones said. "If the whole team could be under 20 minutes, we could be unstoppable."

"I do expect the record to continue to be broken," Jensen said.

Besides breaking the newly set record, the ladies dream of making it to the state meet.

"We are starting to realize what we need to do to make it to state," Jensen said. "I am excited to see what next year will bring."

Winning isn't everything for the Lady Warriors

Developing team bonds make the season unforgettable

With a total of seven seniors, the Lady Warriors had great leadership this season. The ladies made working "together" a theme for their season, as well as a goal for each game.

"We struggled with staying strong the whole game," senior and captain Erika McGuire said. "We would usually win the first game and lose the second, and after that we would get discouraged and end up losing."

When the end of the season was coming near, the Lady Warriors faced their long-time rivals, the Ben Davis Giants. With a state-recognized junior playing as a middle hitter and a full team of good athletes, Ben Davis was a tough match for the Warriors.

The ladies lost the second game of the match, but worked together to keep their confidence to defeat the Giants. The Lady Warriors came back to win with a score of 3-1.

"Ben Davis was a good game because we were able to come back from losing a game to win the match," McGuire said. "We worked hard to get their players mentally out of their game, and we capitalized on their mistakes."

After a few more matches, the ladies reached the Sectional Tournament. They defeated Broad Ripple in the first round with a score of 3-0. The Warriors then moved on to play another big rival, Lawrence North. The ladies competed well, but were unable to defeat the Wildcats to go further into the tournament.

The Lady Warriors ended their season with a winning record of 15-14. A few of the seniors completed their last season with awards and honors. Senior captain Stephanie Weinman made All-County, and McGuire was named an honorable mention. McGuire and another senior Samantha Vail also qualified for Academic All-State.

"As a senior, it wasn't the best way to end the season, but even though we weren't as good of a team, we had a lot of fun and gave our best effort all season," Weinman said.

The ladies formed close relationships with their teammates after years of playing together in school and also in club volleyball.

"We played together since at least the eighth grade, and that made the season even more fun," Weinman said.

The Lady Warriors had a successful season because they knew the tactics of their teammates very well after many years of playing together.

Momentum picks up after Warriors beat cross-town rivals

Boys soccer team comes through with all their efforts to beat their rivals Mt. Vernon

For the first time since 1999, the boys soccer team achieved a double-digit winning record. Working their hardest at every game, the team ended their season at 11-6.

The road to the boys soccer success really took flight in their match against the Mount Vernon Marauders. Mount Vernon was going into the game on a 2-0 winning streak, but wasn't prepared for the strength, speed, and talent of the Warrior team.

"The rivalry with us and Mount Vernon has been heated for many years. It was especially a big game since we haven't beaten them in eight years," junior Levi Fistrovich said.

It was a hard fought battle on both sides of the ball, but getting the early edge was the Warriors, with a goal early in the first half by junior Christian Wilson.

"After I scored our first goal we were able to ease up a little and really dominate the game, and immediately the game began to open up for us," Wilson said.

The first half concluded with a score of 1-0, but there was still a second half to play.

After a quick pep talk from Coach Isang Jacob, the boys stormed back onto the field loose and ready for the second half. Unfortunately, the boys were taken by surprise by a quick goal. The game was more physical in the second half; Fistrovich received his third yellow card of the season and Wilson received his first.

But not too much longer into the first half, the Warriors were able to strike back. Mount Vernon wasn't finished either and got a goal of their own.

With a last ditch effort, Wilson broke free of the Marauder defense and took the ball all the way into the box before he was fouled, giving him a pentalty kick

Senior Alex Lyon took the long walk from half to the penalty kick mark to step up and try to put the Marauders out of their misery. Lining up to the ball, Lyon took a deep breath and the scoreboard switched from 2-2 to 3-2 Warriors lead.

In the last 15 minutes of the game, the Warriors were able to stick it out and finish the game with a final score of 3-2. For the first time in eight years, the Warren Central Warriors were able to take down their cross-town rivals, the Mount Vernon Marauders.

"We came through with a victory in hostile territory, our emotions were high and with the collective effort of the team, we achieved a win!" Lyon said.

Scoring that night for the Warriors were Lyon, Wilson and senior Grant Brackin.

"Even though we didn't make it out of sectionals, we still had a superb season," Fistrovich said in reference to their season.

Overtime showdown leaves Lady Warriors heartbroken

A long season of hard work and dedication ends in dramatic fashion for the Warriors

With not having the best of records at 4-11-2, the girls soccer team looked to close their season in a dramatic fashion.

Coming off of a late season win to the Flashes of Franklin Central, the lady warriors were looking to carry the intensity into sectionals.

First round of sectionals wasn't a big deal as the Warriors demolished the Broad Ripple Rockets with a score of 6-0 and had 22 shots on goal. The real challenge was in round two where they would have to take on the Lawrence Central Bears.

"Sectionals is where we get to show everyone what we've got," senior Jenny Mendez said. "It is a time where you will see some of the best soccer in the state."

It was a cold October night, with a light wind blowing in. The stage was set; the lights were beaming majestically on the field. The expressions on the faces of the players told a story of how badly they wanted this game. It was round two of sectionals.

The whistle blew to signify the beginning match, the ball moved ever so slightly forward and the game had began.

It was a battle on both sides of the ball, both sides not giving an inch to the other team. The first half would close with a score of 0-0.

After meeting with their coaches, the teams regrouped as they took the pitch. Both teams looked reenergized for the intensity and tempo that was surely was about to pick up.

The first breakthrough in the game came from no other than senior Cheyenne Bracken, from a low crossed ball served in by senior Jenny Mendez. It was a goal that put the Warriors up 1-0 with little time remaining on the clock.

Sadly, the Bears weren't done just yet. In the closing stages, the Bears took a last minute effort on goal by the Bears Carly Strobel. It was in this last minute effort that had tied the game one goal apiece and sent the game into overtime.

Unfortunately, the luck for Warriors ran out. In double overtime, Nathalie Sidebottom from Lawrence Central, put the sectional title out of reach for the Warriors, and after 104 minutes of hard-fought soccer, the whistle blew with a final score of 2-1.

The hopes of hoisting the sectional trophies were gone; it was all over.

"It was a great season. We all worked hard and everyone gave the best they had all year," junior Emily Klacik said. "It was so much fun being with everyone."

AT THE FOOTBALL game against Middletown, Katie Poole runs the flag after the team scores a touchdown. This game was played at the Paul Brown Stadium in Cincinatti.

THE SQUAD DOES a cheer by spelling out Warriors with their poms. This was the crowd's favorite cheer.

DURING HALF TIME, at a boys basketball game, the squad preformed for the crowd by doing stunts.

They put the WAR in Warriors

Throughout the football season the cheerleading squad came up with fun themes for the games

To the cheerleaders, many of the games are alike. They get the crowd involved with cheers and chants, but what do they really do to make the games memorable for the fans? This year, the cheerleaders created themes for various games to get the students, parents, and other fans involved.

The cheerleaders made big signs for the players to run through at each home game, and when they played against the Carmel Greyhounds, their goal was to "Take The Hounds To The Pound." The theme was a blackout, so the fans and students dressed in all black.

Another popular theme was when the team played the Terre Haute South Braves. Everyone, including the cheerleaders, dressed in neon colors to show that the Warriors could use their "brightness" and knowledge of the game to overcome the Braves.

According to senior Katie Dillard and junior Heather Hodges, however, the most memorable theme night of the season was facing long-time rivals, the Ben Davis Giants.

Wearing camouflage bandanas and socks, the cheerleaders led the Warriors to a victory, creating a night of "war" on the field. The student section painted "Shrink the Giants" on their stomaches in green, black, and gold paint to emphasize the idea of war.

With the theme of war, more students and fans got involved than ever before. It created more intensity on the field and kept the fans excited through the entire game.

"We blew Ben Davis out of the water that night," Dillard said. Facing the Giants was definitely the most memorable game for the six senior cheerleaders.

Many fans don't realize what the cheerleaders do other than cheer the team on at every game. Making signs and decorating locker rooms for the players every Thursday before games are small things that make a big difference.

Each year, the football cheerleaders have the tradition of cheering on the morning announcements. For many years, they have also done seven push-ups for each touchdown and extra point during games.

This year, the girls added more to the tradition by starting themed games. This tradition is one that will continue through following years, and it will allow future cheerleaders to have a greater impact on the memories of the players and fans.

New year new mentality new coach

First year coach Greg Graham brings a new outlook and a new attitude to Warrior basketball

No one thought they would see the day 13-year head coach Scott Heady would resign his position.

At the end of the 2007-2008 basketball season, he did just that. Heady gave up coaching because he received a part time job at a university and he wanted to spend time with his family.

With an empty coaching position, one person walked into the picture, Greg Graham.

Graham had played for the Warriors from 1986 to 1989. He then went to play basketball at Indiana University under head coach Bob Knight.

In 1993, Graham was a NBA draftee for the Charolette Hornets in the first round, with the seventeenth pick. He played a total of five years in the NBA with four different teams.

At the time of Heady's resignation Graham was coaching a semi-pro team, the Anderson Alley Cats. Soon after the Alley Cats season ended, Graham came to Warren to assist the Warriors.

"I thought coming back to Warren would be a positive influence for not only the players, but also the student body," Graham said.

Graham made an impact immediately, putting the boys through conditioning, open gym and film sessions.

"I expected change because of a new coach," senior Ed Hazelett said. "So when Graham first worked with us, I was assured that change was coming."

Graham stepped in, changed the offense and encouraged his new team to speak their minds.

"Graham communicated well with the players," Kennedy said. "I've been able to become more of a vocal leader, on and off the court."

Graham, or the team for that matter, didn't expect to finish as low as they did.

"Even with our 10-win record, I still think it was a successful season with Graham," Hazelett said. "I was satisfied."

Graham made the team more up beat and he coached them to a 10-14 season with a loss in the second round of Sectionals.

They defeated teams such as East Chicago Central, Ben Davis, and Pike.

The team has started looking forward to future years.

"We will be a younger and a more positive team," sophomore Bennie Bertram said. "The senior leadership is leaving and it's time for everybody to step up."

"I believe Heady was successful in his 13 year career," Graham said. "I just want to be as successful as him."

Leave your heart on the court

The Ladies carried around pocket-sized hearts to symbolize the passion in which they would put into every game they played

Basketball as you see it, know it, feel it, and live it everyday. It is not just the game that makes it a sport. It's the love that the players contribute on and off the court.

The Lady Warriors put their hearts into having a successful season. They pushed through when times got rough and they moved the program forward in the direction that it needs to be in. They experienced success while building excitement about the season.

In order to commit themselves to their team and the game of basketball, each player carried around a pocket-sized heart. The hearts stood for the love and commitment that they put towards the team and the season.

"For me, the hearts were a symbol of what I wanted to give both Warren and the program," Michael Brooks, the new head coach, said. "I do believe that the girls understood everything I said to them when I presented them with the hearts. To watch them go out and play with the passion they played each game with was amazing. So though I gave my heart to them in May, they have given me theirs ever since."

The girls played each game like it was their last. They left their hearts on the court night in and night out.

The ladies remained mentally tough and well prepared for the next challenge that they had to face. They were able to establish an identity to wear teams down with their speed and defense.

The girls grew as players throughout the season and developed chemistry that is needed to be an elite team. All the players on the floor were willing to share the ball with one another and their communication played a major role in how the season played out.

Every girl on the roster was key in the success of the team. Six players out of the 12 averaged over seven points each game.

Although the season did not end with a sectional championship, it was a huge success in moving the program forward. The main focus of the season was to establish a base in which the program could build on every year. This year's experiences and close losses will only make the team tougher for the next year.

"The best part about coaching this team was that this group knew they were doing something special," Coach Brooks said. "I feel this group of girls will always be remembered because they captured success when no one expected them too. With their success, the bar has been raised."

Long road leads two Warriors to state

With their record not great, two Warriors still shine.

The wresting team had only one thing in mind this season, state. Even with the loss of key graduates Kyle Willis and Michael Van Skyock, seniors Nick Odom, Matt Mooreland, Gabriel Berry, and junior Michael Johnson-Jones were going to do their best to lead the team to accomplish their goals.

The season did not go as well as they had hoped it would, winning only 12 out of their 26 matches, putting them just below the .500 mark.

"Really, only three teams should have given us trouble this year." Coach Matt Schroeder said.

Still the team looked toward sectionals to close the season on a high note.

In sectionals, the team fuiled to advance, but, the Warriors were able to advance 11 people out of sectionals.

After regionals the number dropped to just five and by state, the number was just two, Berry and Johnson-Jones.

This was Johnson-Jones' second year in a row going to state. Last year Johnson-Jones was not able to place but he looked to improve his second time around.

Berry had a long road to get to where he was. During the season he went 43-0, beating tough kids from around the state, including Aris Allen, ranked sixth in the state.

"I really couldn't have asked for a better season," Berry said. "The team pushed me to where I got."

Berry started out strong against his first two opponents, defeating them with a combined score of 15-1. His next match against Christian Lentz from Mishawaka High School did not go as planned.

Neither gave an inch. In the last seconds of the match, Lentz was able to pick up one point to give him the win, Berry's first loss in the season.

After his loss to Lentz, Berry had to face Nathan Cleveland in the consolation bracket. With a 1-0 loss to Cleveland, Berry took fourth in state.

The other hopeful, Johnson-Jones, was projected to place fifth in the tournament. He made it to the second round until when he lost to Marcus Shrewsbury from Crown Point High School, who went on to win state, which put him in the consolation bracket.

In the next round, Johnson-Jones lost again, putting him in running for seventh place. Johnson-Jones quickly got after Randy Kaufman of Rennselaer High School and beat him 6-2 to claim his seventh place title.

"I got a lot of accomplishments done this year and I look forward to next year." Johnson-Jones said.

Records keep coming down

Four records fall this season to an improving swim team led by an underclass brother and sister.

The records fell this season at the natatroium which inspired the team to improve even more and pushed them to break more records.

It had been 17 years since the last swimming record was broken. But on a Tuesday night against Brebuf Jesuit, the newest record was set by sophomore Ali Chorpenning.

Chorpenning broke the record by two seconds. A 5:35.76 is the time that will stay in the books for at least one more year.

"It is such a good feeling knowing that my teammates will always be there for me," Chorpenning said. "These records would not have been possible without them."

The 500 free record wasn't the only record Chorpenning claimed this season. The 100 fly couldn't stand a chance to her dominating preformance. Her record-breaking time came in just .6 seconds faster then the old record time.

Another record broken with the assisstance of Chorpenning was the 200 free relay. The relay team, consisting of freshman Monica Mendez, sophomores Madison Bobrow and Chorpenning and junior Haley Dickey, took down the record by less than a second.

"It was an amazing experience and even more psecial to be able to share it with my family," Mendez said. "It is only the beginning."

Chorpenning's twin brother also is not a stranger to breaking records. In the sectional finals Andy Chorpenning placed first and broke the school record by five seconds.

"It was a great feeling to finally get that record after working so hard for so long for it," Chorpenning said. "I was really happy with how sectionals ended up."

Even though the season win/loss records may not show it, both teams improved in preformance, team bonding and practice dedication.

The team will only graduate three seniors and has several young talents coming up from the middle school level that should give a face lift to the lineup.

Gymnasts stay positive through their most successful season since they last competed in State.

Setting a goal to stay positive throughout the season was definitely a successful one for the Lady Warrior gymnasts this year.

They finally had enough girls to compete as a team and used their positive attitudes as motivation.

The girls did very well at each meet and had the most successful season since the team got 7th place at the State meet three years ago.

In the County tournament, the ladies faced 7 very competitive teams. They totaled a 93.0 as a team score, which was the best team score since the State meet.

Sophomore Shelbie Whitaker placed 5th and senior Anni Mooreland placed 7th in the all-around at County.

Facing those seven teams in County gave the ladies a good idea of what to expect in the Sectional meet.

The ladies worked hard and prepared all season to build up to Sectionals.

They continued keeping positive attitudes, using funny phrases like "Can I get a woop woop?"

"We knew we had a good shot at placing in the top three at Sectionals, and it was one of our goals to go on to Regionals," Mooreland said. "I tried to stay positive so the other girls could, too."

While the girls did a very good job at County and throughout the rest of the season, they did even better when they reached Sectionals.

They achieved a team score of 96.25, improving their best season score even more.

At the Sectional meet, the ladies faced 13 teams and placed 4th, missing the advancement to Regionals by only a few tenths of a point.

Whitaker, Mooreland, and freshman Caitlyn Ward were the leading gymnasts for the Warriors.

They each placed at least in the top 15 out of 42 girls on every event.

"I had my best season since freshman year, and I'm really proud of all the girls on the team," Mooreland said.

Instead of just setting a goal to stay positive throughout the season, the Lady Warriors actually accomplished that goal and had the most successful seasons in years.

"We really had fun this season and I'm glad we all got along and did so well," Whitaker said.

Coach Burton has great success in his first year, winning the boys County title and Sectional title.

While there was no question that the boys golf team had talent, a disappointing end to the previous season had failed to convert the skeptics and the critics.

The boys came into this season as an honorable mention in the preseason polls, while schools like Brebeuf Jesuit High School and the defending State champion Cathedral High School had been labeled as two of the Indiana's elite golf programs.

During a team meeting in April, Coach Dave Burton had one message for his team that would sum up their season perfectly.

"It is time for us to go out and show everyone how good we really are," Burton said.

Burton's voice and message seemed to echo in the ears of Warren's top five golfers during their Sectional rounds on June 5.

South Grove Golf Course hosted the Lawrence Central Sectional, one of the most competitive in the state due to the participating teams from Cathedral, Brebeuf, and Warren.

Both Brebeuf and Cathedral set the bar high with team scores of 290, putting them in a tie for first place.

Junior Conner Worley and freshman Connor Jones both did their job by posting scores of 72 and 75 respectively.

Junior Matt Spicuzza started out his round at par through six holes. Spicuzza left the seventh hole two-under par after scoring an Eagle on the 467 yard par 5 and would finish his round with a two-under par score of 68.

Not to be outdone, senior Cody Risser ended his round with a score of 68, giving the Warriors the Sectional title with a team score of 283.

But the day was not over for Risser and Spicuzza who had tied for Medalist of the tournament, and so had to play a sudden-death playoff to determine Sectional medalist.

After staying even through four playoff holes, it was Risser who finished with an Eagle to outlast his teammate Spicuzza and earn Medalist honors.

For anyone who didn't know before, the boys showed anyone and everyone how good they really are.

A Complete Turn Around

After a three-day losing streak, the Warriors managed to turn it around with little experience backing the team.

The boys tennis team managed to impress this season, turning it around after starting off with a three-game losing streak. But instead of rolling over, the team did a complete 180, firing back into contention at the Pike Invitational, undressing the Red Devils on their home courts.

The boys would go on to the sectional finals, though they would ultimately be defeated by the Lawrence Central Bears.

Though they were unable to secure the hardware, the fact that the boys were able to pull through general inexperience and a very nebulous varsity lineup, definitely brands this season as a success. The team boasted only two seniors, Erik Johnson and PJ Allen, which meant that there would be a fair number of fresh faces on the starting team.

And by "fresh" faces, think freshman faces.

The roster was filled out with Paul White at one doubles, Spencer Garnier at two doubles, Joe Drummond at three singles, and other first- and second-year players filling in as role players.

Though these relative youngsters were given general places in the starting lineup, they collectively played every position from two doubles to the top singles spot, as part of Coach Bryan Hanan's lineup changed to find the most flexible and capable team in order to maximize the squad's chances of bringing home W's.

The team bought into his plan and managed to work out early round wins in both the county tournament over Arlington and a 3-2 win in the first round of sectionals over Scecina Memorial, but was overpowered by a driven Bears team that had just won a shocker over Lawrence North.

While the team was unable to win their first sectional crown since the 1984 season, their ability to overcome early season setbacks and several untested players, the team rose to the occasion and powered their way to a season that was anything but a failure.

Young Team Struggles Through Tough Season

The young and unexperienced team tries to make ends meet with the help of the few seniors on the team.

After losing 13 seniors from last year's 4-19 team, the team this year came in with new talent and energy including four freshmen and many other players who had little previous varsity experience.

With such a young roster, the responsibility of leading the team through the treacherous Metropolitan Interscholastic Conference fell squarely on the shoulders of seniors Daniel Cho and Dell Barker.

The Warriors started out slow, losing their first three games by a combined total of 16 runs.

Their first win, 10-9 against Roncalli, came behind the bat of junior Nick Logsdon who had three hits on four attempts and two RBIs.

It looked as though the team had woken up and was finally firing on all cylinders, but that was not the case. The team continued to struggle, losing its next 13 games.

The boys were able to put an end to their skid on May 16, beating Greenfield Central 12-1. Freshman Thomas Rea led the team with a double and a home run in the game.

The boys' follow-up of that performance was less than spectacular, losing three of their next four.

The boys struggled to say the least going into Sectionals, but with one of the easier Sectional draws, there was a legitimate chance for the Warriors to win a Sectional title.

After forfeits from Broad Ripple High school and Arlington High School in the first two rounds of Sectionals, the boys found themselves in the Sectional championship against 4A No. 2 Cathedral High School.

After rain delayed the game for a couple of days, the boys hit the diamond to take on the Cathedral Fighting Irish in a Sectional championship game that looked to be out of reach for the team as they struggled through the regular season.

The boys didn't fall for the "We're just happy to be here" trap, but were ultimately out slugged by the Irish 8-11.

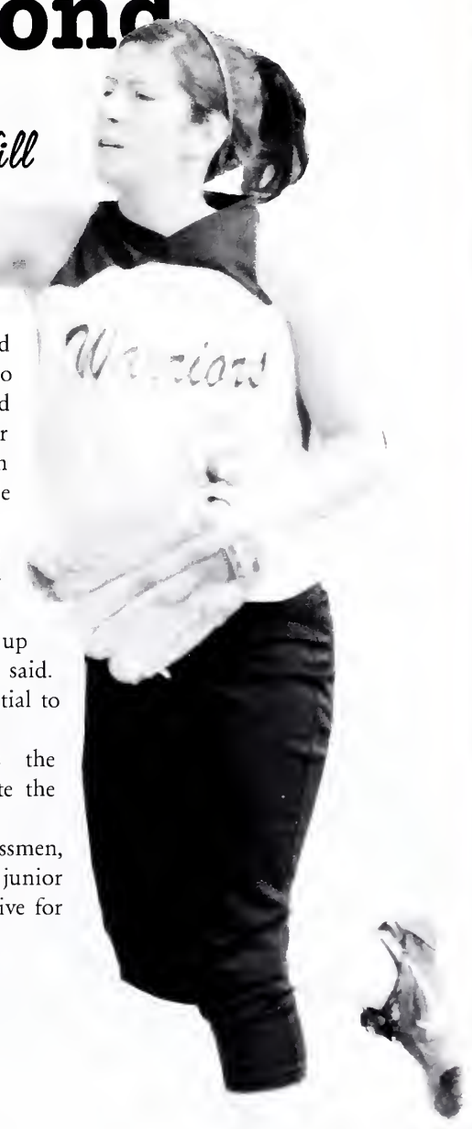
Underclassmen take over the softball diamond

The freshmen, sophomores and juniors of the softball team work to fill spots left by seniors



Who said varsity starters could only be seniors? Whoever said it wasn't talking about the Warriors varsity softball team, which had only three seniors: Erin Abrams, Jynell Boser and Brei Gossett. Out of those three ladies, only Abrams and Boser started.

After coming off of a sectional championship the previous season, the lady Warriors had many on-field spots to fill.

The underclassmen knew they had to step up to occupy many of these positions.

"Since there weren't many seniors, the underclassmen really had no choice but to step up," sophomore Olivia Bauer said. "We had to work harder at practice to earn our spots."

Freshmen Brookelyn Visker and Caitlin Enright were examples of two girls who had to prove themselves.

The ladies didn't have a lot of experience with leadership, but they showed that they were physical enough to start a majority of the games.

"We have struggled with leadership a bit with so much of the team being sophomores and freshmen," head coach Allyson Gruner said. "However, all of the girls have grown over the year and will be more comfortable stepping up into leadership roles."

The lady Warriors had some trouble focusing in practice and winning many games .

"Mentally, we don't always show up the way that we are capable," Gruner said. "However, we still really have the potential to win many games in our future."

Even with only three seniors the underclassmen are starting to appreciate the experience on the varsity team.

"It is important that we, as underclassmen, take advantage of our years to come," junior Katie Bartlett said. "We just have to strive for success."

Boys track earns Regional title

The boys track team earns its seventh consecutive Regional title behind the leaping abilities of seniors Derrick Spight and Marquis Collins.

The stage had been set. After winning a seventh Sectional title by 88.5 points, the boys track team traveled to Connersville High School for Regional competition.

Sophomores Eric Robinson edged out Richmond's Leo Cordova by five hundredths of a second to become 100 Meter Dash Regional champion. Sophomore Robert Hollins finished sixth of the eight runners with a time of 11.23 seconds. Junior Jaleel Anderson finished third of 15 runners in the 400 meter dash with a time of 50.62 seconds.

The boys struggled through the next few events with tenth and eleventh-place finishes in the 800 meter run from seniors Tim Bixler and Doug Ellington, a sixth place finish in the 1600 meter run from junior Ben McMillan, and an eighth and ninth place finish in the 3200 meter run from junior William Wert and senior Caleb Pack.

Business picked up though with the 110 meter hurdle. Both senior Marquis Collins and sophomore DeAngelo Winston qualified for the finals, but it was Collins who timed out with a 14.26 to claim first place by 0.14 seconds.

This performance was followed up by another second place run by seniors Tim Bixler, Kyle Shickles, Doug Ellington and sophomore Sean O'Brien in the 4x800 meter relay.

With the conclusion of the track events, it was up to the field events and some of Warren's top athletes to secure a seventh straight Regional title.

Senior Jacob Aldrich had a strong performance in the Pole Vault, clearing 14' and placing fifth.

The boys performed well in the Shot Put as well. Senior Matt Haynes placed seventh with a distance of 50'3" and sophomore Kris Harley placed second with a distance of 54'10".

Finally, it was down what is arguably Warren's best event, the high jump.

The competition started with the best leapers from Center Grove, Batesville and Northeastern all clearing 6'2", but none of them could go any higher.

Senior Jamal Hampton was there to answer the call though, clearing 6'6" and putting himself at the top of the leader board. Until New Palestine's Bryden Basaran's joined Hampton at the 6'6" mark.

Then came the main event performer. It was senior Derrick Spight's turn to set the bar. After handily defeating the competition at the Sectional meet, Spight came back with a repeat performance clearing 6'9" and winning an individual Regional championship in the high jump and adding on to the Warrior point total.

All the hours logged at the track after school, all the team workouts and all the season meets had led up to this, another Regional title and a ticket to the State meet at Indiana University.

2009: Girls Track Attack

The three-time state champion track team looked to end their season with another state title.

As the girls track season began, a lot of expectations were set for the ladies. They were entering the season as three-time state champions. " We look forward to the state meet series," assistant coach Jennifer Jenson said. "That is what we have been working for the whole season."

Throughout the season there were several key meets that proved to be an indicator of how the girls' toughest competition would size up. One of those meets was the highly anticipated MIC meet.

The girls scored 99.5 points and took third place to North Central with a scored of 118 and Carmel with 104; both teams had been the ladies toughest competition throughout the year. Though they took third place, the team did not go without MIC champions. The 4x100 consisted of Ebony Wright and sophomores Brianna Harrison, Brianna Aikens, and Logan Hayes left the competition in the dust. One of the most consistent runners, Logan Hayes, also won the 100 and 200 meter dash. Sophomore LaTisha Martin won the 400 meter dash.

Though the results of MIC were not exactly what the ladies were looking for, they moved on and focused their attention to another meet that would work as an indicator of how the state meet would turn out, the Warren Relays.

As in years past the seniors of the team, seven this year, were recognized at the beginning of the meet.

The girls went on to win the Warren Relays which proved to be a motivator as the ladies headed into sectionals and regionals, taking first place at the both meets and locking in their run as state champions once again.

On June 5 the ladies boarded their buses and headed to the Indiana University campus to compete against some of the toughest competition through out the state, all fighting for the title as "State Champions."

During the course of the day the ladies worked as hard as they could in an effort to claim the state title for the fourth year in a row. As the final scores were tallied the Lady Warriors fell short by six points to Lawrence North, taking Runner-Up for the first time in three years.

Though there was a wave of disappointment throughout the team, the hard work and countless hours put into a common goal can never be cut short because of state ranking.

Album

There is a world of difference between being a 14-year old freshman and an 18-year old senior. From learning how to drive to going to prom for the first time, there is a lot that happens during four years of your life.

Those four years are arguably the most important four years you can ever live.

Throughout high school there are lessons learned that go beyond the classrooms and the halls of Warren Central, these are the lessons that shape who we are and what we are to become.

Knowing ones identity is something that some spend a lifetime obtaining. It is in the heartbreak that we find completeness, in the emptiness we feel full, and through the tears we find happiness.

In the big picture, four years is nothing compared to a long-lived life but high school is the basis of the things that one will do in their lifetime.

Most high school seniors would agree that they have undergone a metamorphosis from freshman year to senior year. Whether it be finally getting their braces off, having their first relationship, or joining a club or team that deeply impacted their life.

"I am a totally different person compared to who I was at the beginning of high school, " senior Angie Forshee said.

For Forshee it was becoming heavily involved with the Performing Arts Center, being a part of Hi- Lites show choir, Speech team, Drama club president, and having leads in numerous productions.

Forshee's story is a common, though where she chooses to excel differs from others. Some students found their niche in athletics, art, or even robotics amongst the other activities Warren Central has to offer.

The vastness of Warren makes it easy to get lost in everything, not just the endless hallways but even further than that. It is up to each individual student to make a choice and decide to find what is best for them. A series of decisions that hold the potential to change a life, your life. Though the thought of things looms upon the heads of students, some choose to seize the opportunities at hand.

"If it weren't for the different groups and activities here at Warren, I know I would not be the person that I am today, " Forshee said.

Times change and with the passing of the days and months and years there are some things that remain. Friendships can withstand the test of time. It is a more than possible for relationships to beat the odds and defeat obstacles you never thought it could.

As characters develop there are things that do not fade into the past. Even though we are all becoming different people the basis of who we are can never be lost.

"Knowing others is wisdom, knowing yourself is enlightenment."

Senior Vs Faculty [Softball]

The stage had been set on that warm fall afternoon, the ultimate David vs. Goliath battle.

The faculty had looked on as Cheese and Rice tore through the competition in the senior softball tournament.

Led by none other than Daniel Cho and Zach Sparks, Cheese and Rice made mincemeat of their fellow senior opposition.

Cheese and Rice had proven to be talented on the field, but their area of expertise was intimidation. The loud and confident Qaniah Douglas hit the faculty early and often with trash talk in hopes of destroying their psyche. The faculty proved resilient though, retaliating with some trash talk of their own.

After days of build up in which the game was given every nickname from the Senior/Faculty Bowl to the Battle at the Dusty Diamond, the day was upon them.

The Faculty looked to be out matched by the younger, sprier, faster, and all-around more talented Cheese and Rice, but they knew they would not just lie down without a fight.

They would have to come out of the gates quickly in hopes of catching Cheese and Rice off guard.

Shepler and company walked onto the field with the determination of Warriors in hopes of spiting the naysayers and the critiques.

Momentum bounced back and forth as each team traded blows, figuratively, until finally the Faculty gained the upper hand on an ESPN "Web Gem"-worthy play by Ms. Mobley to stretch out from the plate to make a pivotal out midway through the game.

It was all Faculty from that point, burying Cheese and Rice 7-2.

That game, which included ugly plays, fierce competition and players with poor hand-eye coordination, dwarfed all the great sports upsets of the past and could quite be the greatest game ever played.

ENGLISH TEACHER MR. McGowan prepares to pitch with determination to the senior team. The faculuty had an advantage in the game due to some seniors being absent for part of the game.

MR. JAMES TAYLOR keeps his on the ball, hoping that senior Qaniah Douglas strikes out.

ENL TEACHER MS. Katherine Mobley focuses on giving a big hit outfield. The faculty was in positive spirits throughout the game, winning 7-2.

Senior Vs Faculty [Kickball]

GEOGRAPHY TEACHER MRS. Kines pitches to the seniors during the senior vs. faculty kickball game. Due to a rescheduled game, tensions ran high for the final senior vs. faculty event.

The dawn broke on May 12, 2009 with a red glow, symbolic of the blood, sweat and tears that were to be shed that afternoon. The stage was set for what was arguably the greatest game ever to grace the softball diamond of Warren Central.

The prior fall, a softball game took place in which the senior representation, Cheese and Rice, was embarrassed by the faculty in a 7-2 loss.

After a long winter, Cheese and Rice had the faculty in their sights and vengeance on their minds.

Cheese and Rice, whose core involved baseball players and seniors Daniel Cho and Dell Barker, suffered a possibly debilitating loss before the game had even started when the kickball game was scheduled on the same day of a baseball game.

No matter the handicap, Cheese and Rice walked onto that field determined to exact their revenge on the faculty.

The faculty fielded with all the coordination of a newborn giraffe to start off but as the game went on the faculty had the grace of a gazelle, making several great toss outs at second base.

The game remained close early on, but midway through the game senior Zach Baughman got a leg into a fat pitch rolled right down the middle of the plate. Mr. McGowan fielded the ball in left field but it was too late, Baughman had gotten himself a momentum swinging triple.

As the sun started to set in the west and time was dwindling, the seniors got one last boost from a couple of late arrivals. Straight from their baseball game, Cho and Barker provided an instant spark to Cheese and Rice.

Cho made an immediate impact as he kicked in senior Mahoney Brogan for the go-ahead run.

Cheese and Rice didn't look back from there as they beat the faculty 6-3.

After two games and two very different results, we may never know who is better than who.

SOCCER COACH MR. Dave Yeaman gives it his all to make a big kick and score a run for the faculty. Although the facutly was ahead for part of the game, they could not shut out the seniors.

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR MR. Marcus Clayton prepares to throw a pass to a fellow teammate. The team was made up of various teachers and staff members.

All I Really Needed to Know... I Learned In Freshman Year

Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and cold milk are good for you. Live a balanced life. Learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work everyday some. Take a nap every afternoon. When you go out into the world, watch out for traffic, hold hands, and stick together.

From the essay "All I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" by Robert Fulghum

Christopher Rajabi, junior

"Sit still. Get your homework done right the first time. Make friends. The more mature you are the better things go. Don't give up."

Taylor Pierson, sophomore

"Be careful of who you trust. Stay you, don't let anybody change you. Don't fall behind in class."

Alan Tarver, junior

"Get by and survive. Watch what you say around upper classmen. Pay attention."

Cameron Bristow, sophomore

"Suck up to the teacher. Get involved in sports and clubs. Stay on the teacher's good side. Have fun. Have no regrets."

What It's Like To [BE]

Deionte Buckley

Q. Which teacher has helped or inspired you the most?

A. Coach Apple at Creston always told me that he would be watching me on Sunday mornings playing football in the future and that gave me motivation.

Q. Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?

A. I didn't really know what I wanted to be when I was in elementary school but now I've matured and I want to be a lawyer.

Q. What do you want to be doing in five years?

A. Hopefully I will be playing football at Virginia Tech.

Q. What do you want to achieve in high school?

A. I want to have a Core 40 diploma, have three state rings in football, and join the track team.

Q. What's the best advice you've gotten and from who?

A. Mr. Shaine said, "In life you have obstacles. You have to move on to prove all of the people wrong that have ever doubted you."

Q. Do you live by a phrase or motto?

A. "The sky is the limit." It means anything is possible if you work hard and never doubt yourself.

Q. What word would you use to describe yourself?

A. I would define myself as determined because I'm up for any competition and ready to achieve my goals.

Principal Power!

The power to rule the ~~world~~ school is in their hands...

New ~~world~~ school order!

The laws of...
Violet Murff

- Listen to student suggestions and take what they say into consideration.
- Take the block off the computers.

The laws of...
Earriel Starks

- Allow people to listen to music.
- Better lunches.
- Half day on Monday.
- Not as much homework.

The laws of...
Siafa Massaley

- Make passing periods longer.
- Shorter classes.
- No tardy policy.

The laws of...
Ashley Tennessen

- Allow electronics.
- Lower prices for things in the bookstore, the vending machines, and the lunchroom.

What It's Like To [BE]

Evann Smith

Q. What are you involved in outside of school?

A. The Rosebuds Program; it's a little sister program and about leadership. I'm an Indiana Black Expo Bling Champion and community service. I also sing in two choirs at my church.

Q. What teacher has helped or inspired you the most?

A. Mrs. Flecker at Creston helped me the most because she always watched out for me and made sure I got my work done. She was always someone to talk to and she helped me with the start of my cheerleading.

Q. How would you define senioritis?

A. Senioritis is being nonchalant about finishing school and focusing more on the future and not what they need to get done now.

Q. What do you like most about Warren?

A. I like all the diversity, the fact that it's a big school with lots of people, and the opportunities for everyone.

Q. Do you live by a phrase or motto?

A. The values and phrases that my grandmother says are the advice I go by.

Q. What was your first day at Warren like?

A. Crazy! It wasn't super hard to find my classes and it wasn't as scary as I thought it would be. It was exciting and hectic.

Q. What word would you use to describe yourself?

A. Amazing or awesome because I see myself as a fun, loving, and caring person and I'm very goal-oriented.

How I Survived Freshman Year

Quintesha Henderson, 10

"I made it through my freshman year by staying positive, and thinking about the years to come. I also ignored all the 'he said, she said' drama."

Kindra Dunlap, 11

"I didn't run my mouth. It's a lot easier to make friends that way. Also, I stayed out of peoples' business and minded my own. I found good study habits and was a good student. Add a little personality and teachers will love you!"

"My freshman year, I was afraid of what was coming so I pretty much stuck to myself. I made a couple of friends that I stayed with throughout my high school career. I just did what I needed and it took me through."

Marcy Grey, 12

"I kept my grades up and focused on school and not getting in trouble. I also didn't worry about the things that were said about me 'cause I know I got some haters."

Q. What are you involved in outside of school?

A. I am on the competitive gymnastics team at Gymnastics Unlimited & youth group at Calvary Temple Church.

Q. What teacher has helped or inspired you the most?

A. Mr. McKenzie, my 6th grade Math teacher at Stonybrook, helped me the most when I was going through a very hard time with a close friend's death and other friend problems; he just talked to me about it and helped me out.

Q. Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?

A. Kind of, in elementary school I wanted to be a Gymnastics Olympian and now I've realized that it's nearly impossible to do that so I want to go into Psychology.

Q. What Crayola Crayon color are you?

A. Emerald Green because it's my favorite color and I own A TON of green stuff.

Q. What was your first day at Warren like?

A. I only got lost once. I forgot to wear insoles in my shoes so my feet hurt all day and I was shorter than everyone in the hallways so that was kind of scary.

Q. What's something people don't know about you or would be surprised to find out about you?

A. I'm really into guy sports and video games.

Q. What is the best advice you have gotten?

A. In 8th grade I was going through some relationship problems and didn't know what to do and my friend Brittany Meek talked to me for three hours straight about how important my life was; it was really sweet.

The Must Haves of 2008-2009

Music

The world of music shares a diverse group of artists. For example, artists such as country music sweetheart, Taylor Swift and hip hop royalty Lil' Wayne were all recognized on Billboard's Top 25 Artists list. Coldplay's Viva La Vida topped the charts in 2008 making them the top band.

Gadgets

Technology held a new meaning in 2009 as an iTouch proved to be more than just a music player but to some a lifeline. Video games grew into a way of life. Gamers all around the globe anticipated games such as "Gears of War," "Call of Duty 5," and Halo 3.

2008-2009 was marked with trends and fads that will forever be remembered like scarves in the summer and having the new iPod shuffle.

Fashion

Clothing was anything but ordinary. A mix of modern style fused with a dash of hippie and a little bit of jungle fever made this unique style of today. Leopard print was on anything and everything as animal prints made their way to the top of fashion lists.

Wish List

1. $159.95 Ray-Ban Wayfarer sunglasses

2. $999.99 Apple Macbook

3. $19,120 Softcover copy of the first Harry Potter

4. $395 Juicy Couture Charm Bracelet

Caleesha Jaffe

Q: What Crayola Crayon color are you?

A: Purple because it has different shades just like I have different personalities.

Q: Which teacher has helped or inspired you the most?

A: Ms. Bell has given me good advice and we have shared some similar situations.

Q: Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?

A: In elementary school I wanted to be a dancer. Now I want to be a forensic scientist or volleyball player.

Q: Do you live by a phrase or motto?

A: No, but I believe that you shouldn't let anyone tell you can't do something. If you have a dream chase it.

Q: What is something people don't know about you or would be surprised to know about you?

A: I eat nine meals a day.

Q: What do you want your life to be like in five years?

A: I want to get a degree from college and play volleyball.

Q: What is the best advice you have gotten?

A: My mom and my coaches always tell me to be confident and stay focused.

What It's Like To [BE]

Dayquan Vance

Q: What are you involved in inside school?

A: I am in the Connection show choir, I'm on the speech team and I was in Beauty and the Beast.

Q: What is the best advice you've gotten?

A: My modeling coach always tells me to work it and be myself and my parents tell me to never stop being me.

Q: Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?

A: Yes, in elementary school I wanted to be a full time performer but now my career interests are much more diverse with acting, modeling and singing.

Q: What do you want your life to be like in five years?

A: I would like to be modeling for a high fashion magazine or be a singer.

Q: What do you like most about Warren?

A: I like that you can express yourself and be who you want to be.

Q: What is something people don't know about you or would be surprised to know about you?

A: I have a twin, I do part-time modeling and I am also working on a CD.

Q: What word would you use to describe yourself?

A: Versatile, I'm very new and fresh.

Things You Can't Live Without...

Going Beyond Food, Water and Shelter

"I was afraid faculty members would take it away," junior Thomas Fort said. Fort is known as the boy who carries the cross. He has been carrying the cross since his sophomore year to show his devotion to Jesus. "My brother carried a cross when he was a freshman and I decided to when I was a sophomore," Fort said. The cross was made the summer of 2007 at Harvest Christian Camp. The counselors encouraged the kids to carry the cross around to praise God. Since he has been carrying the cross, he adopted the nickname, "Jesus." "It was my own decision," Fort said. "I never leave the house without it; I carry my cross to restaurants, school, church and youth group." Fort feared persecution at school for expressing his opinion. On the front of the cross it reads DWJD, which stands for Do What Jesus Did. Fort wants people to express who they are and what is important to them. "I believe people would be more at ease when they find out who they are."

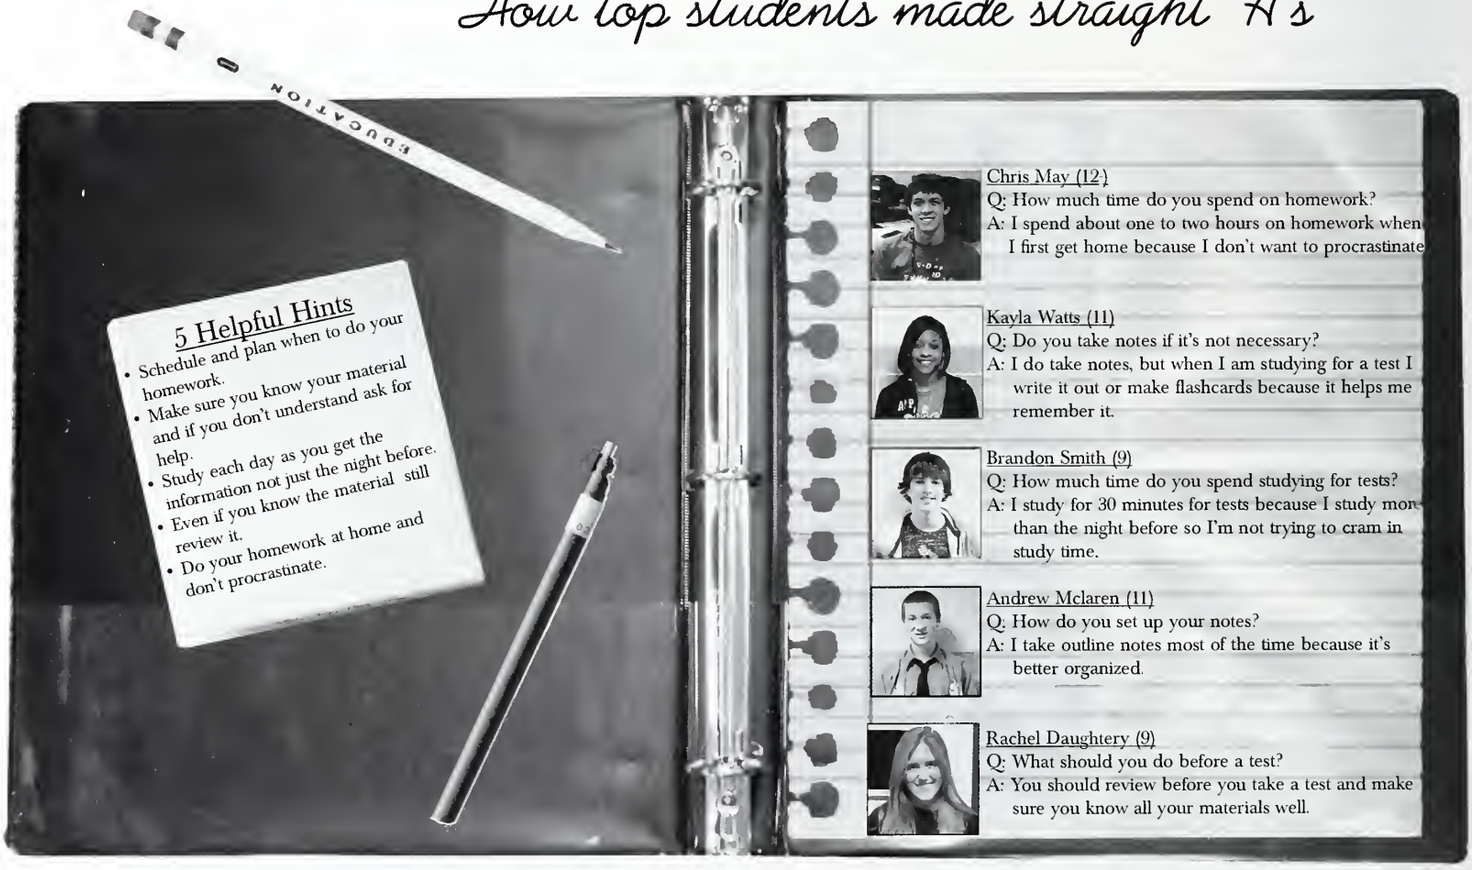
5 Ways to Make A's

How top students made straight A's



5 Helpful Hints

- Schedule and plan when to do your homework.
- Make sure you know your material and if you don't understand ask for help.
- Study each day as you get the information not just the night before.
- Even if you know the material still review it.
- Do your homework at home and don't procrastinate.

Chris May (12)
Q: How much time do you spend on homework?
A: I spend about one to two hours on homework when I first get home because I don't want to procrastinate

Kayla Watts (11)
Q: Do you take notes if it's not necessary?
A: I do take notes, but when I am studying for a test I write it out or make flashcards because it helps me remember it.

Brandon Smith (9)
Q: How much time do you spend studying for tests?
A: I study for 30 minutes for tests because I study more than the night before so I'm not trying to cram in study time.

Andrew Mclaren (11)
Q: How do you set up your notes?
A: I take outline notes most of the time because it's better organized.

Rachel Daughtery (9)
Q: What should you do before a test?
A: You should review before you take a test and make sure you know all your materials well.

What It's Like To [BE]

Charity Hinds

Q: What teacher has helped/ inspired you the most?

A: Mr. Salemi has taught me a lot about global issues and has gotten me interested in politics.

Q: What's something people don't know about you or would be surprised to find out about you?

A: I have my own promise to myself that I won't have my first boyfriend until I'm 17.

Q: What was your first day at Warren like?

A: It was very hectic trying to find my way around, but it was exciting.

Q: What's the best advice you've gotten and from who?

A: The best advice I've gotten was from my mom. She said, "If you want to go for something push higher and be the best at it."

Q: What do you want to achieve in high school?

A: I'd like to graduate with Academic Honors and get a full-ride scholarship to college.

Q: Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?

A: In elementary school I wanted to be a veterinarian but now I want to go into dentistry.

Q: What are you involved in inside school and outside school?

A: Outside of school I'm involved in youth group. Inside school I participate in softball and volleyball.

What It's Like To [BE]

Eveyln Ramirez

Q: Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school? If so how?
A: In elementary school my dream career was to be a firefighter because I liked the truck and I also liked the speed.

Q: What do you want to be doing in five years?
A: In five years I plan on attending Indiana University or IUPUI.

Q: Do you live by a phrase or motto?
A: I live by two mottos, the first motto is to live life like there is no tomorrow and the second motto is to live, have fun, laugh and also love.

Q: What are you involved in outside of school?
A: Outside of school I have a job at Subway and I also work at a jewelry shop once a week.

Q: What's something people don't know about you or would be surprised to find out about you?
A: Something that people would be surprised to find out about me is that I am not Mexican.

Q: What teacher has helped or inspired you the most?
A: The teacher that has helped me the most is Ms. Moody, but she doesn't teach at Warren Central anymore.

Q: What word would you use to describe yourself?
A: The word that I would used to describe myself is wild because I like acting crazy without any reason just because I love to be myself.

Q: What's the best advice you've gotten?
A: The best advice I have ever gotten was study hard and don't let anything get in between school because it will just slow you down.

Eveyln at work very very bored.

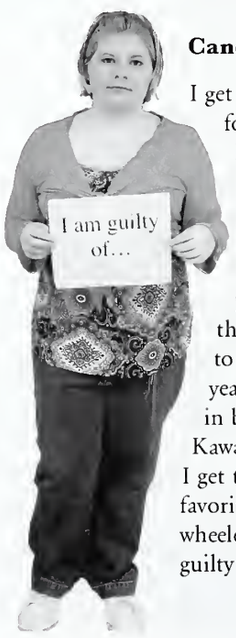
Guilty Pleasures

There's no such thing as too much of a good thing

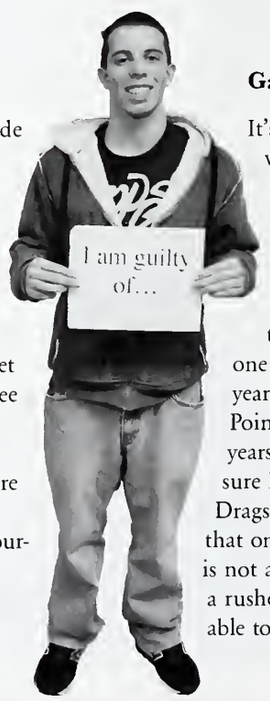
Debrae Smith

Shrimp is so good that they make my mouth water when I see them. I am guilty of eating shrimp because they have a distinctive taste that makes me feel as though I'm on the beach. When I was six years-old I saw my father eating them and I tried one and that's where it all began. I get to enjoy the taste of shrimp about every four months. Sam's Club brand are the ones I like best. Since the first time I had them, I fell in love.



Candiace Gross

I get so excited when I ride four-wheelers because I love to crash and speed. My father let me ride them for the first time when I was five years- old and after that I was hooked. I get to ride them every three years in the cornfields in back of my home. Kawasaki Store is the store I get them from and my favorite brand is Moss. Four-wheelers are definitely my guilty pleasure.



Gabriel Fry

It's the greatest feeling when you're pumped up with adrenaline and your hundreds of feet in the air on a roller coaster. My father was with me the first time I rode one when I was eight-years-old. I go to Cedar Point every couple of years and I always make sure I ride the Thriller Dragster because I like that one the most. There is not a doubt that having a rushed feeling and being able to scream my lungs.

Q: What's the best advice you have gotten?
A: The best advice I have gotten is to believe in yourself and you can do anything you set your mind to do.

Q: What was your first day at Warren like?
A: My first day at Warren was confusing because it was the middle of the semester, the school was big, and I didn't know where anything was.

Q: What does senioritis mean to you?
A: What senioritis means to me is being anxious to get out of high school, you're fed up and you are tired.

Q: What do you like most about Warren?
A: What I like most about Warren is there are so many people to get to know and there is a lot of diversity.

Q: What's something people don't know about you or would be surprised to find out about you?
A: Something that is surprising to know about me is that I am actually a really big germaphobe and I usually always have a bottle of hand sanitizer close by!

Q: What's your favorite thing you have learned at Warren?
A: My favorite thing I have learned at Warren is how to just break out of your shell, jump in, and meet new people.

Q: What Crayola Crayon color are you?
A: The Crayola Crayon color I am is pink because it's pretty like me.

Q: What word would you use to describe yourself?
A: The word that would describe me usually is happy.

The Great Debate

Prom: to go or not to go?

One of the many critical questions students faced when they became juniors was whether or not they were going to attend prom during their junior year or senior year.

Some students believed it was better to wait until senior year to go to prom because it should be a cherished high school memory, not just another school dance. Things such as the total cost of a dress, tux rental, shoes, dinner and other miscellaneous expenses can also affect someone's decision to wait it out.

"I do believe it's better to go only your senior year because then it becomes a graduation party," junior Gabe Johnson said. "I feel like prom should be a one time experience so that it has more emphasis on my high school experience."

Johnson plans on going to prom his senior year and although he has not started making plans, he is looking forward to the memories that he will get to keep forever.

Fellow junior Sara Hancock also thought along Johnson's line of waiting until senior year. "It would be exciting to go twice but more special to go once," Hancock said.

However, sometimes the excitement of looking glamorous from head to toe, going to a fancy dinner and dancing the night away more than once can sway the often chilched idea of having just one "perfect prom".

Junior Emily Klacik did not hesitate to say she was going to attend. "I think that prom is important to the high school experience but I don't necessarily think it's important to go only senior year," Klacik said. She was excited to get pampered and dressed up for the day. She went to prom with her best friend, junior Casey Carney, and a dozen of their closest friends.

Kyle Davis, junior, also went to prom. He took a limo downtown and ate at Champs with senior Emily Uhlenhake. "I think that by going both years you know what to expect when senior year rolls around, plus it's a lot of fun," Davis stated.

Whether or not juniors decided to go both years or just go once prom is a major part of the high school experience that everyone should enjoy.

Your Opinion...

"I think that it's fine to wait until senior year to go, but there is nothing wrong with going before then if you're able to. I've always wanted to go so I just decided to go this year. "

- Kayla Watts

"It is a lot of money to pay to go to prom two years. I want to make it more special for my senior year. I am really looking forward to chillin' with my home dogs and going in a limo."

- Sarah French

"I think it's best to go senior year. If you go before that it kind of ruins the purpose. I don't know if I'll actually go but I'd like to have it on the list of things I've done in my life. "

- Emily Hess

"I don't think it's a big deal to wait. I went my sophomore year and I plan on going my senior year as well. This year I'm going with my girlfriend Anita Watkins, and we are going to King's Island on Sunday."

Q: What was your first day at Warren like?
A: My first day at Warren was great because I didn't get lost because I already knew my way around the school.

Q: What's your favorite thing you've learned at Warren?
A: My favorite thing I have learned at Warren was the John F. Kennedy assassination in Mr. Dixon's class.

Q: Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?
A: My dream career has not changed since elementary school because I still want to succeed in becoming a firefighter.

Q: How would you define senioritis?
A: I would define senioritis as knowing the end of your high school career is insight and it can become a lazy act.

Q: What do you want to achieve in high school?
A: In high school I want to achieve graduating with Academic Honors Diploma.

Q: What Crayola Crayon color are you?
A: My Crayola Crayon color is red because it's bold just like a fire truck and a fireman.

Q: What are you involved in outside of school?
A: Outside of school I have a job at K-mart.

Q: What word would you use to describe yourself?
A: The word I would use to describe myself is honest.

POP Culture

Lady Gaga hit the airwaves with her hit single "Just Dance." Lady Gaga was the symbol of uniqueness and continued to shock the world with her different style and extraordinary stage performances.

The presidential election of 2008 was one of the most heated races to date. Between Obama/Biden running aganist McCain/Palin it seemed everyone was up on their political savvy.

"Scrubs" fans were not without their weekly fix of the TV show for very long. Luckliy, CBS picked up what NBC dropped and fans were more than happy that the thick sarcasm and witty comments continued to fill the airwaves.

Superbowl XLIII made its way to one of the most watched Superbowls as the Pittsburgh Steelers went aganist the Arizona Cardinals. In the end, the Steelers came out on top with a score of 27-23.

What It's Like To [BE]

Jasmine Allen

Q. What's the most interesting thing you've learned at Warren?

A. I have learned that I can relate to everybody in some way. I have never been in a clique and I have never had just one group of people I hang out with on a regular basis. This year I have become more stable in the area of friends but even my five best friends aren't all friends with each other.

Q. What are you involved in inside school?

A. In school I do marching band, jazz band, honors band, winter drum line, and Key club.

Q. Do you live by a motto or phrase?

A. I don't live by a motto, but I could apply one to the way I live life: "Get cape, wear cape, fly." To me that means if you dream and apply your dreams to life you can do what people think is impossible.

Q. What Crayola Crayon color are you?

A. I would say black. Black is mysterious and you can't really say anything about it. I'm the same way. Until you get to know me you really don't know anything about me.

Q. What do you like most about Warren?

A. I like the Performing Arts Center. The whole art of performing is wonderful. I support the PAC 100 percent!

Q. What's the best advice you've gotten?

A. Listen. I wouldn't know anything if I didn't do it.

Q. What teacher has helped/ inspired you the most?

A. I would definitely have to say Mr. Hilmer. We haven't ever spoken but he loves what he does and never complains about it. I would like to love what I do and never look back and complain about it.

Q. What are you involved in inside school and outside school?

A. Currently in school I'm on the speech team, but I also played on the soccer team. Outside of school I do volunteering services and deliver speeches about my country and exchange experience to all manner of people ranging from children to adults.

Q. What teacher has helped/ inspired you the most?

A. Ms. Howell has been a tremendous help to me. From her varied and useful advice, I can honestly say that I wouldn't have survived a month in Warren without her.

Q. Do you live by a phrase or motto?

A. I have always lived by the saying, "All human activity is prompted by desire, determination, and love." This basically tells me that I can achieve anything if I desire for it, I'm determined to get it, and above all I love it. This quote has been the backbone of my life and has led me a long way.

Q. How much time do you spend on college applications?

A. Surprisingly, I spend less to no time on college applications since I won't be graduating at Warren. When the school year ends, I have to go back to Ghana to complete my final examinations and wait until January 2010 to do college applications. However, I am applying for a scholarship from the United States embassy in Ghana to Harvard.

Q. What word would you use to describe yourself?

A. Loving.

Q. What do you like most about Warren?

A. The commitment of teachers to their work really incites me. However, the friendliness of the students and their commitment to their sports is second to none.

Amos as a Perfect, a group similar to student council.

Q. Does your dream career now differ from the one you had in elementary school?

A. Oh, it's way different! In elementary school I wanted to be a ballerina. I also wanted to be a paleontologist. Now that I have done a lot more self discovery I've decided I want to go into performing arts. Also, I'm interested in journalism.

Q. What are you involved in inside school and outside school?

A. For four years I've been participating in Warren's Color Guard and Winter Guard. I've done theater classes for three years, and choir for two years. So along with classes and school activities I don't have much time for anything outside of school.

Q. What's the most interesting thing you've learned while at Warren?

A. Even in a school with so many kids, where you would think it's easy to be anonymous, it's really hard to be!

Q. What Crayola Crayon color are you?

A. I'd totally be Razzle Dazzle Rose or some crazy concoction made by the Crayola Crayon maker. So I'd be one of a kind!

Q. What do you want your life to be like in five years?

A. I'd like to be done with college and working on my dream of performing on Broadway come true. Or teaching Color Guard somewhere; either would be great.

Q. What do you like most about Warren?

A. My favorite thing about Warren would have to be the Performing Arts department. There's so much talent there and everyone knows everyone. It's like you have a whole other family at school!

Q. What is the best advice you have gotten?

A. "I know the future can be intimidating but you can't let that stop you. You've got too much potential to be scared."

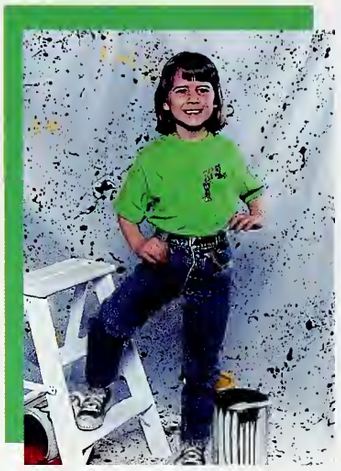
CLASS OF 2009



Look at what a wonderful person you have become! I couldn't be more proud.
So smart, a leader, and cute, too! As I watch you study, I know you will be successful in all of your endeavors. Remember, the conclusion to your hard work is what you seek, but it is the path to that destiny that makes you who you are.
Great things await, but slow down and have fun along the way.
I am so excited to see what happens next.
Don't forget you'll always be my baby, but also my best friend.

Love you, Mom

Congratulations Tiffany Breann Neff! We are very proud of you. You are beautiful and intelligent, and you will go very far in life. Love, Mom, Step-Dad, Brianna, Gammy, James, and Family.

[brittney]graves

We've watched you grow into a beautiful, strong young lady.

Still in our hearts, you will always be our baby.

Congratulations!

Les, your Dad and I are so very PROUD of you and all that you have accomplished in the past 4 years of highschool. It is amazing to us how much you have learned in the field of Technical Theatre. We enjoy watching you work and how you can fix problems and always know what to do. You have grown into a wonderful young man and have proven to be a real leader for those around you. We have seen you stand strong for your faith and what you believe in, especially this year, when you lost a true mentor and friend, in Matt Oskay, your beloved Tech teacher. We know that as hard as it was for you to be that strong pillar for your "techies", you took the leadership and stood in the gap to help everyone through the grieving process, when we knew that you were hurting just as bad, if not more than anyone else. You have such a love in your heart for others and you are always looking for those around you who need a friend or a word of encouragement. We have watched you do things the past two years that you said you never would do, like get up in front of people and sing. You always said that you were a 'behind the scenes' kind of person, yet you really showed us another side of you when you were on stage performing with Connection Show Choir. It thrills our hearts to watch you mature into the wonderful person that you have become. We know that God has great plans for your life and are looking forward to see all of the great things that you will accomplish in your future. Keep putting God first in your life, and He will help you to do great things! We are so proud of you, son, and love you very much.
With much love,
Mom & Dad

To the Class of 2009:

My very best wishes go out to each of you for a bright and happy future that is filled with more laughter than tears. You are an amazing group, and it has been my pleasure to get to know so many of you and witness your talents and successes.

Many thanks go to the officers for their hard work and commitment to their class. I will miss our special times together working on activities, decorating spirit boards, eating, or just sharing some laughs. You made my job so much easier.

Thank you to the Class of 2009 for making my last year here at Warren a memorable one. I hope that you have enjoyed your last year as much as I have enjoyed mine. I hope that you will take with you some memories of good times that you shared with friends and faculty at Warren. On days when things just don't seem to go the way that you want them to, look back on those memories and allow yourself a moment to smile- I know I will. Good luck to each of you.

Love,
Ms. Widgren

[senior]class

The Class of 2009 would like to thank Ms. Widgren for everything she has provided for us. She is an amazing person and we are extremely grateful for her diligent efforts. Many people are unaware of the "behind the scenes" work that she does for our class. Her devotion and passion for this class is indescribable. We will never forget the memories we have shared. You will be greatly missed and your replacements have big shoes to fill. Thank you and we love you with all our hearts.

Love,
The Senior Class of 2009

Since the day you were born you have brought a ray of sunshine into our lives. Your honesty, drive, desire, and fearlessness have been truly inspirational. It has been an absolute honor to share this journey of life with you. We love you more than anything!

So it[be]gins...

The end of what was an incredible school year. From the Huddle Up Against Hunger campaign to the biggest "Dancing With The Faculty" to date. True, the end of another school year came but only proves to be the beginning of something else. With the closing of one door another one opens and the future looks bright for all Warriors. As we look to the future with our hopes and determination, it is today that will forever shine. Shine on.

colophon

At 224 pages, the 2009 Warren Wigwam was smaller than the past several years in response to the tough economic times. Herff Jones printed 425 copies of the 72nd volume of the Wigwam. Although production costs went up, the yearbook was able to sell for the same as the previous year which were sold at an "early-bird" price of $45, a regular price of $50 and a final price of $55 in the late sale. Cathy Wines was the Herff Jones representative. Mark Haab served as the yearbook advisor and Publication director. Rich Shepler was the principal. Kaleigh Napier-Bruhn served as yearbook editor-in-chief and Suzanne York and Sara Harris were the associate editors. The book was printed on 80 pound gloss paper and all page layouts were created with Adobe InDesign CS3 and Photoshop software and designed by the Wigwam Staff using Macintosh G4 and eMac computers.

Photography-
Most photos were taken by staff photographers using a Nikon D100, Nikon D80, Canon SX10, Minolta Dimage 7, and Nikon Coolpix 5700. Prestige, our official school photographer, provided sports group pictures and some special event coverage.

Typography-
Headline and caption fonts were from the Opus family. Accent font was Arizona. Body copy was set in the Baskerville family 10 point.

Cover-
The simple cover was designed by the editors and showcased this year's theme. Just Be embodied the Warrior's attitude and spirit. With so many clubs and sports and other opportunities, Warriors are hard to categorize because the can [be] so many things. Its bracketed design was inspired by the project RED campaign, launched by The GAP in 2007.

Workshops-
Students attended Ball State Summer Workshops and the JEA/NSPA National Convention in St. Louis. The staff also attended the Indiana High School Press Association State Convention at Franklin College where the 2008 Wigwam was a Hoosier Star Finalist.
